A Dangerous Embargo Can Uncle Sam Afford It? Billy Sunday Says No Four Things You Need

By Arthur Brisbane

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 27—A gasoline price war holds public interest for the moment here. Standard Oil of California's cut of two cents, made to meet erratic price cutting, will be followed by deeper cuts by other companies. The oil situation is bad, and an elimination process will gradually weed out weaker sisters. Then consumers that have been buying gas too cheap will even up matters by paying too much.

The antiquated Sherman act preventing common sense business arrangements make conditions worse. Some American companies demand an embargo on oil from foreign countries. Powerful companies that own inexhaustible subterranean "lakes of oil" in Venezuela and elsewhere oppose the embargo.

They want to bring in their cheap foreign oil. They are protecting this country's interests, perhaps without knowing or caring. An embargo would hasten the exhaustion of American wells, putting consumers and the mother industry at the mercy of foreign well owners. What that would mean the country learned when Britain controlled rubber and regulated the price.

President Hoover's veto of the soldiers' bonus bill expresses his sincere conviction that the bill would be harmful, to the country and the men. Repassage of the bill over the veto will, perhaps, decide whether the President and Mr. Mellon or congressmen and service men were right.

Many believe that making it possible for 3,000,000 men to spend a billion and a half of dollars quickly will help business and not ruin Uncle Sam. He found ten billions, quickly enough, when foreign nations wanted the money and survived that, although many of the billions will never come back from Europe.

Billy Sunday, at whose name gorgons and chimeras dire, yes, even Satan himself, shiver and shake, refuses an enormous sum offered for moving picture work. He makes a mistake, neglecting to put conversion and saving of souls on a production basis. His speeches lash sinners, and describe hell in a way to keep you awake, searching your conscience.

But what are words, compared with sight. Seeing is believing. Irving Thalberg of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer would make a picture of hell in action, the arch fiend, devouring sinners at each of his three mouths, the horrid dog Cerberus with his assorted barks, the terrible hag swallowing her young and the saw-dust paths of the repentant would be crowded.

Billy Sunday's voice would be heard, above the crackling of flames, and the wailing of the sinners, saying "I told you so." What an opportunity. And at the end, a close-up of Billy Sunday, and "Ma" Sunday, their work on earth done, rising to glory, a million angels crowding to congratulate them, saying, "It's thanks to you, Billy, that I am up here, instead of down there."

If you have four things, intelligence, energy, money and interest in the welfare of others, you can do good work.

Mrs. Greenway, of Tucson, Ariz., has the four. She started a furniture factory, for ex-service men, not sick enough for a hospital, but needing recuperation in a perfect climate. That did much good. Then she built and is running a Tucson hotel, made up of separate bungalows, all furniture made by the service men, and all for sale to guests. Just at present, the place is packed, but try to go there anyhow, if you go to Tucson. If you do not go you make a mistake.

Such a woman as Mrs. Greenway, finding a way to help men injured in their country's service, working hard, with no profit and little thanks for herself, should be at least praised. Mr. "Pepper," Tucson's king of all newsboys, assures you that Mrs. Greenway is "an incomparable lady," putting the accent on "incomparable," on the ante-penultimate syllable, "par."

"She gave me," says he, "two tickets for the opera that cost at least five dollars apiece. It was called 'The Walker,' and say, you never heard that kind of music in your life."

This endorsement of his Walkure would gratify Wagner.

ARRESTED BY FEDERAL AGENTS

Three Held for Grand Jury on a Charge of Conspiracy Scored by Judge

Lawrence, Feb. 27—Two radical strike leaders were arrested on federal deportation warrants and a third faces arrest as soon as he obtains bail on civil charges as immigration inspectors entered the strike situation today.

The 12-day strike ended today with the return of 5000 workers to the mills.

Miss Edith Berkman, 27-year-old organizer for the National Textile Workers' Union, and William T. Murdock, a national officer of the union, were taken by Immigration Inspectors George A. Parker of Washington and Frank A. Chase of Boston immediately after they furnished $20,000 bail.

Pat Devine, union vice-president, was held by civil authorities in lieu of bail but the federal agents displayed a warrant for his arrest.

The federal action came after the three had been denounced in District court for "flouting the laws."

STRIKERS GO TO WORK.

The immigration inspectors said Murdock is already under $1000 bond on deportation proceedings at Danville, Va.

The returning employes followed the result of an overwhelming vote late last night to end the strike and the Washington, Ayer and Wood mills reopened again with their return. They went to work through a picket line of 200, the latter kept moving by police.

Mill officials reported that the remaining 3000 would report by Monday, tomorrow being a half-holiday.

2 SEIZED IN STRANGLING OF GIRL

Ex-Convict and Attorney for Slain Young Woman Held on Diary Note Clue

New York, Feb. 27—Two men, one her lawyer and the other an ex-convict, were held by police today for questioning in the strangling of Vivian Gordon, henna-haired woman of mystery and vice witness, whose body was found in a ditch in Van Cortlandt Park yesterday.

Both men held, Jose A. Radaleff, an attorney, and Sam Cohen, alias Charles Harris, an ex-prisoner, were picked up by police after their names had been found in the slain girl's diary.

One inscription in the diary, police said, read:

"I fear but one man and he is Radeleff, my lawyer, who, if he wanted, could get Cohen and a couple of his henchmen to do away with me."

Radeloff and Cohen were to be examined today as to their associations with the dead woman while police continued search for Patrolman Andrew B. McLaughlin, who arrested Miss Gordon on a charge of immorality in 1923 and was instrumental in sending her to the Bedford Reformatory. Yesterday it was said that McLaughlin had gone to Bermuda on a five-day vacation.

RECALLS BECKER CASE

The discovery of the body of Miss Gordon coming just at the peak of the drive on police corruption when she was scheduled to appear as a witness recalled the slaying of Herman Rosenthal in 1912, which sent Police Lieutenant Charles Becker to the electric chair.

Three taxi drivers were also being questioned by police after they had told a story of having chased for four miles a taxicab in which a henna-haired woman, dressed in black, was struggling with two men.

SENATE UPSETS LOAN VETO

Washington, Feb. 27—The Senate today overrode the President's veto of the veterans' bonus loan bill.

Washington, Feb. 27 (AP)—Before crowded galleries, the Senate today debated President Hoover's veto of the veterans loan bill.

Senator Vandenberg, one of the administration stalwarts, opened the debate with a plea to disregard the veto. He dissented with the President "with the greatest reluctance," but argued that "the facts are the same as when the Senate voted 72 to 12 to pass this legislation."

"This bill is a sane solution to the perplexing question which some have proposed to answer with a $3,000,000,000 or $4,000,000,000 program," the Michigan senator said.

NOT CREATING NEW DEBT

"If there is tax increase next winter it will not be because of this legislation," he said. "We are not creating a new debt, but merely transferring the form of a present obligation."

Senator Hastings, Republican, Delaware, replied to Vandenberg, as Senators called for a vote. He deprecated the paying of money to a veteran who returned from the war without injury.

Hastings suggested that some veterans would "steal the certificates" from their wives and go out and buy automobiles.

As the roll call neared, administration leader conceded they would not have as many votes to sustain the veto as they had originally

Police Also Learn Man Called on Mrs. Ellis on Night She Was Beaten

Authorities definitely established that the socially prominent and vivacious widow received a mysterious caller in her home Wednesday night, a few hours before her head was crushed by a hammer wielded in murderous frenzy.

Another who called that evening, police learned, was Maj. Ralph Townsend Heard, World War hero, who was leaving for the West Indies and had been given a farewell party, attended by Mrs. Ellis, in Brookline, earlier in the day.

Maj. Heard's call was one of many he made on Haverhill friends, including Col. George W. Langdon, that evening.

He was the first American artillery officer to fire a shot in the World War. Two weeks ago today he was sued for divorce by Mrs. Yvonne G. Heard, of Boston, daughter of a wealthy Canadian lumber operator.

ANSWERED HERSELF

Agnes Reardon, 30, a maid, and Norah T. Ring, 49, a cook, the only other occupants of Mrs. Ellis' home, furnished authorities with new clues today a short time after City Marshal Charles D. Jones and Chief Inspector Irving O. Finney had been joined in the investigation by Asst. District Atty. John J. Ryan, Jr., who requested the aid of State Detectives Stokes and Ferrari.

Miss Reardon attended church services Wednesday night and Miss Ring was left in the house alone with Mrs. Ellis, it was brought out.

The cook said that about 9 o'clock, the wealthy widow informed her that she was expecting a caller.

"Will I answer the door bell?" Miss Ring asked.

Precisely at that moment the doorbell rang and Mrs. Ellis said: "I'll go."

She went to the door and the

FRIEND TRAILED IN HAMMER ATTACK ON WEALTHY WIDOW

WIELDER MAY HAVE BEEN A WOMAN

Police Learn Haverhill Victim Had Entertained a Visitor on Night of Assault

took aid not see the visitor.

At about 9:30 Miss Reardon returned from church, she said, and passed her mistress' room. Mrs. Ellis called "Goodnight, Agnes," she said and glancing in she saw her lying in bed with a book in her hand.

Both servants then retired and knew nothing of the brutal assault until they found Mrs. Ellis lying unconscious on the floor of her bedroom yesterday morning.

LESS THAN AN HOUR

Apparently, police pointed out, the mysterious caller had departed some time before Miss Reardon returned, which would limit his or her time in the house to less than an hour.

There was a possibility that this caller returned and found a place of concealment until the attack could be made without disturbing the servants asleep in a remote section of the big house.

That the assailant reached the Ellis home prepared to murder was established when investigation showed that the hammer used to inflict the blows had been brought to the house and did not belong there. Both servants were unable to identify it.

The very fact that a hammer was used, coupled with other information which they refused to divulge, led authorities to the belief that a woman, jealous or seeking vengeance for some fancied wrong, may have been the assailant.

The man who called on Mrs. Ellis Wednesday night had been at her home before, among guests at her frequent entertainments.

SLIGHT CHANCE

persons except those acted with the widow and with knowledge of her home have eliminated from the investigation, police declared.

A theory of robbery as motive was early discarded and later authorities definitely laid aside the possibility that a former Haverhill man, who escaped some time ago from the Danvers State Hospital, might have been the assailant.

In Benson hospital, a short distance from her home in Summer st., Mrs. Ellis was reported to have "a slight chance for recovery" by Dr. Charles Benson whose wife was Mrs. Ellis' companion on a visit to Brookline Wednesday afternoon.

Jewelry Worth Nearly $4,000 Untouched in Room Where Mrs. Ellis Was Attaked

She was still semi-conscious and able to speak, police declared, as she lay in her bedside all night on the chance that she would recover sufficiently to make a statement and possibly name her assailant.

None of the mystery and but little of the secrecy surrounding the attack had been dissipated.

ONLY TWO CLUES

The authorities had only two clues: the blood-stained hammer with which the woman was beaten, the telephone and severed telephone cord taken from the rear on the first floor.

That the assailant was a man, police say there is no question.

"It is our theory that the assailant knew Mrs. Ellis and had a knowledge of the house entered," Captain Hussey, directing the investigation, declared.

Mrs. Ellis, member of a family linked with Haverhill since 1640, vivacious and attractive and a widow since 1928, had a veritable host of friends and was prominent in the city's social life, at the Country Club, in bridge clubs and as an entertainer in her home, a huge house on spacious grounds at Summer and Maple sts.

Some one of her acquaintances, probably a man or women moving on the same social plane as herself, entered her home early yesterday without forcing door or window, cut the telephone cord, apparently with a pocket knife, made his or her way to the widow's bedroom, where she was asleep, and beat her.

There was a struggle in the room. The first blow with the hammer, on the right side of the head over the ear, may have been struck while Mrs. Ellis was in bed. A five-foot bed lamp was overturned and a light in a wall bracket by the bed was broken.

She was struck twice more, again over the right ear and then behind the left ear. The latter blow was the last and the most serious, struck with murderous fury, police declared.

In the bedroom were jewelry valued at $3000 or $4000, and a large sum of money. The night visitor did not disturb them.

He or she is believed to have left the house by a side door leading to the sun porch. The hammer, an ordinary carpenter's claw-hammer, was found midway between a garage in the rear of the house and a sundial.

It was lying on top of the snow, evidently thrown there by the assailant.

One bloodstain was found upon it and police believe it may have been hastily washed after the crime.

The suggestion that Mrs. Ellis was involved in any romance was scouted by many of her friends, particularly by Mrs. Myron Spaulding, of Willard rd., Brookline, perhaps her closest.

Mrs. Ellis visited the Brookline home Wednesday afternoon, attending a bridge party at which Mrs. Spaulding was present. She left there with Mrs. Charles Benson, wife of the hospital owner, in the latter's roadster about 5:30 p. m., Mrs. Spaulding said.

"She had many friends, but no romance. She had been in mourning since her husband's death," her friend declared.

Footprints in Snow Made by Victim's Brother in Search for Clues to Attacker

Mrs. Spaulding is the divorced wife of Harris W. Spaulding, local insurance broker who disappeared from this city in 1929 and was subsequently indicted for alleged conversion of funds. She is living in Brookline with her son, Way, former aviator and war hero.

The hammer was found by George Kimball Clement, Mrs. Ellis' brother, who lives near her home and was one of the first on the scene after the servants had found Mrs. Ellis, clad only in a silk nightgown, unconscious on the floor of her room when they went to awaken her.

Footprints in the snow near the hammer were eliminated as being those of the assailant when Clement pointed out that he made them when walking from the path to pick up the weapon.

PHONE WIRE CUT

Mrs. Ellis' bedroom is on the second floor of the house, facing Maple st. The servants' quarters are in a section far removed, and police do not consider it unusual that the sounds of struggle did not arouse them.

The telephone, from which the cord was severed, was located in the back hall. It was an old-fashioned wall instrument, used principally by the servants. Frayed insulation at the cut indicated the cord was severed with a knife.

The sundial, beyond which the hammer was found, is about 30 feet from the back entrance.

Clement, a member of the city water board, was in his sister's home today, and told the following story:

"I was at the hospital early this morning and tried to hold a conversation with my sister whom I found improved over last night. But she was unable to talk. She nodded her head and seemed to be trying to form words, but couldn't speak them.

"Apparently she had to struggle to defend herself. In addition to wounds on her head from the hammer, she had bruises and black and blue marks on her body and arms.

"Dr. Benson told me that she was stronger than last night and there are hopes for her recovery, although her name is still on the danger list. I don't think they are quite sure whether she has a fracture on the left side of her head.

"There appears to be some pressure on the brain which prevents her from speaking. She recognized Dr. Benson and Miss Marks, the head nurse, both of whom she has known for a long time, but she couldn't answer their questions.

"We are entirely at sea about the whole thing; it's a complete mystery. If a burglar cut the 'phone wires and attacked my sister, it is strange he did not steal the valuables in her room. So far as we know, nothing is missing.

"I know of no enemy my sister had, nor any secret admirer, although maybe there was such a person. I cannot believe, however, the attack was for revenge.

"My sister returned in her car from Brookline with Mrs. Benson, wife of the doctor. She retired at 11 o'clock and was all right at that time. That's the last positive evidence we've got.

OLD HAVERHILL FAMILY

"The maids heard nothing. Miss Reardon was entirely surprised when she found her in a pool of blood when she went to call her to breakfast.

"I haven't any theory. I made a search as soon as I reached the house and in the yard, between the garage and the sundial, found the blood-stained claw-hammer. I asked questions but found nobody who heard an automobile drive away during the early morning.

"It is possible, I agree, that the attacker cut the telephone wires to simulate a burglary so as to throw the police off the scent."

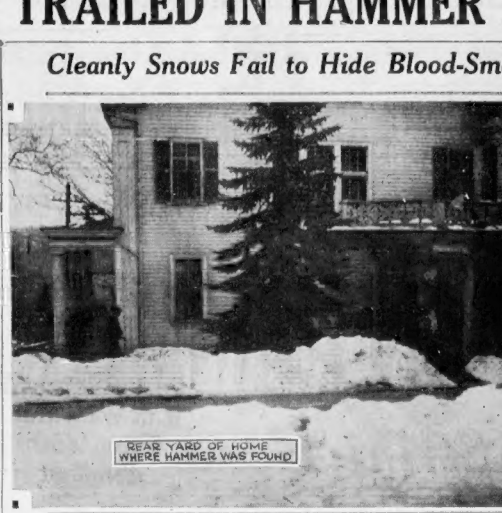
Mrs. Ellis' ancestors were among the early settlers of Haverhill. Her home was originally the home of George A. Kimball, her grandfather and she has maintained it alone since the death of her mother, Mrs. Mattie Kimball Clement, 10 years ago. Her father, G. Colburn Clement, died about 20 years ago.

From both parents she inherited a large estate and she has been accustomed to entertain on a lavish scale.

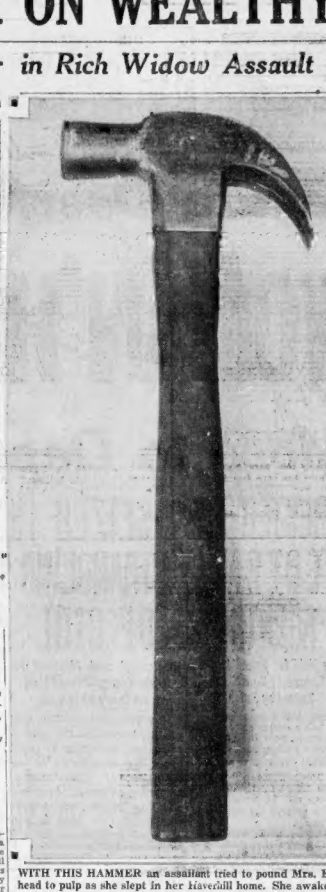
Mrs. Ellis is the widow of John Dwight Ellis, son of the late Charles A. Ellis, retired shoe manufacturer.

They were childhood friends but did not wed until she was 34. They had been married only 14 months when he was found dead in the garage outside their home.

Cleanly Snows Fail to Hide Blood-Smeared Hammer in Rich Widow Assault



IN THE PEAKED SHADOW this thrifty spruce tree cast upon the snows, George Kimball Clement found the hammer with which a murderous assault was made upon his sister, Mrs. Clara Ellis, in her Haverhill home. The weapon, containing one crimson smear and showing evidences of having been cleansed, had been tossed in the snow after the murderer had finished his deed. Photo shows the back yard of Mrs. Ellis' home, Summer and Maple sts., Haverhill. (Staff photos.)



WITH THIS HAMMER an assailant tried to pound Mrs. Ellis' head to pulp as she slept in her Haverhill home. She awakened and engaged her attacker in furious combat, but she is still unconscious and may not live.

counted upon. It was agreed the maximum in supporting the President would be little more than 20, if that many.

Senator Cutting, Republican, New Mexico, said:

"I feel sure the Senator from Delaware did not talk that way in 1917 and 1919. In the opposition to this bill this runs: That veterans are not decent enough to pay any attention to their wives and families."

Cutting disagreed with the statement the soldiers constituted a privileged group, saying they were at the outbreak of the war and still are a "group of average Americans who happened to be physically qualified for the work selected for them."

He said Congress made a mistake by not including a cash option clause in the original bonus certificate act and predicted difficulties with soldier legislation would continue for this reason, "until the full bonus is paid."

Two Are Held in Slaying of New York Vice Witness

They told police they finally lost the cab in Van Cortlandt Park.

Known as the "Female Arnold Rothstein" through the "bright light district," Miss Gordon wrote on Feb. 7 to the police vice probers offering her testimony. Her letter read:

"I have some information in connection with the "Tammany" by a police officer and others which I believe will be a great aid to your committee in its work.

"I would appreciate an interview at your earliest convenience."

As a result of the letter Miss Gordon was invited to appear before the vice probers on Feb. 20, but she failed to respond. The probers didn't follow up the letter.

DEFIED HER LAWYER

Radeloff, her attorney, held for questioning by police, said he knew Miss Gordon had offered to testify in the vice case and that he advised her not to.

"I will. I'm going to give McLaughlin the needle," she was quoted by Radeloff as replying.

This statement started police checking McLaughlin's Bermuda trip plans.

Police were investigating today the report that Miss Gordon had been slain because she was preparing to lay before the vice board attempts on the part of police to extort $500.

Like Rosenthal and Rothstein, prominent "White Light" figures, Miss Gordon had been arrested on many occasions for statutory offense, extortion and other charges. She declared, however, to a confidante, that on the charge on which she was sentenced she had been "framed."

"I was framed and paid policemen $500, then was double-crossed and was railroaded away," she said. "Afterwards I made things so hot that I got back part of the $500."

It is believed that it was testimony regarding this incident that paved the way for her murder.

Three diaries found by the police in the apartment of Miss Gordon at East 37th st. literally teemed with the names and addresses of wealthy New Yorkers, with large amounts of money written beside their names. The finding and reading of the diaries evoked police comment.

"This mystery resembles the killing of Herman Rosenthal by Lieut. Charles Becker and his aides, but there is another phase to it, too. Miss Gordon appears to have been a female Arnold Rothstein," said one official.

Evidently she lent money in large amounts freely and at large interest, and usually collected. One name, that of a well-known man, is listed for $1500, and the debt is not marked paid."

HAD POLICE RECORD.

Though known as Miss Gordon, the murdered woman, was Mrs. Benita Bischoff, the first wife of an Audubon, N. J., resident, it was revealed. She was also the mother of a 16-year-old daughter. Her former husband, Bischoff, is a deputy United States marshal.

Today investigators visited the home of Bischoff at Audubon and gained his second wife, Mrs. Eunice Bischoff, 32.

Mrs. Bischoff informed the detectives that the slain woman had written Bischoff frequently in the past few years demanding custody of their daughter. A letter written to Bischoff several weeks ago by his former wife, accusing him of "framing" her with a New York detective, was seized in the house. The letter read:

"Dear Mr. Bischoff: You have probably heard about the vice investigation now going on in New York city which is growing day by day, that a number of convicted girls framed by the police and others.

WARNS EX-HUSBAND

"You know that I am one of those girls and that my conviction was caused by a frame-up between you and Detective McLaughlin. You may think that you have had the last laugh but get this—I am going before the investigation committee this week and intend to tell the whole story of this dirty frame-up.

"When I am through it will be hot too hot for you, Little Benita, who is old enough now to realize that a dirty trick has been played on me. I intend to go the limit and you know as well as I do that this will mean your finish."

The slain woman had visited a beauty parlor shortly before she was killed. The red hair was finger-waved, the finger nails were highly scarlet and the face had been lifted, recently.

Police records showed that on August 7, 1930, Mrs. Vivian Gordon was arrested on a charge of extortion preferred by Joseph Radelow, a newspaper man. Detectives Harris and Henshaw "trapped" her in the Hotel McAlpin with marked money. Commissioner Mulroney issued orders for both detectives to appear before him at once.

Mary Lewis, Opera Star, Sued by Attorney

Los Angeles, Feb. 27 (AP)—Mary Lewis, grand opera singer, who a few days ago brought suit against a film company for $25,000 for alleged breach of contract, was herself made defendant in a claim for $2,050 for legal services.

German Army Leader Muzzles Fiery Followers

Berlin, Feb. 27—Gen. Baron Curt Von Hammerstein, chief of the German Army, has told his co-generals and ex-generals to stop making fiery speeches and writing inflammatory articles criticising the Reichswehr.

In a circular letter, Baron Von Hammerstein exhorts the officers to maintain a reserved attitude towards the army, claiming the undue criticism is not only disloyal to the army itself, but to the country.

The Nationalist press, commenting on the letter, says that it is meant to muzzle political opponents of the present government, especially the Fascists.

WHEN ROAD OF STOLEN LOVE WITNESSED GHASTLY MURDER ON PARADE

MRS. PHOEBE STADER, who was killed by the "parade murderer" in Rahway, N. J. The woman's body has been found in Virginia, and William Frazer has been arrested. They had been lovers for s. .nths, declares wife of the prisoner, who "told all" and brought about arrest of her husband. (International Newsreel photo.)

THE ARTIST gives an impression of the playboy "parade killing." After calling on a relative, with the corpse seated in his auto, Frazer drove to Bowling Green, Va., and hid the body.

WILLIAM FRAZER, Rahway playboy and would-be sheik, who was arrested in Raleigh, N. C., as the "parade killer" of Mrs. Phoebe Stader; whose body was picked up at Doswell, Va. Frazer was always a devoted husband until he inherited $25,000.

FRAZER WAS GETTING MAIL at Raleigh, N. C., general post office. For two days police watched the general delivery window. Frazer appeared, asked for mail under assumed name. The arrest followed.

ANOTHER PHOTOGRAPH of the dead woman. It was her husband who rushed to Virginia and there identified the body as his wife. Mrs. Frazer, wife of the prisoner, insists that Philip Stader knew of the friendship between his wife and Frazer. Stader was called to her home to talk matter over and Stader and Frazer, after a few drinks, left arm-in-arm.

RELIC OF THE GAY 90'S AWAITS CLAIMANT

THIS CARRYALL, which was a very "doggy" equipage in the days when Mother and Dad stepped out, was found, horse attached, today in Somerville and caused the police to puzzle their brains in an effort to place its ownership. At last reports they are still awaiting a claimant. In the front seat are Bob Carey, Jim Coakley and John McCarrin; in the rear Bill Cullen, Larry Knight and Thomas Flynn. (Staff photo.)

WOMEN SEE 6 DIE IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

DOOMED MEN PRAY AS THEY MEET FATE

Executed in South Carolina for the Murder of Two White Residents

Columbia, S. C., Feb. 27 (AP)—Six Negroes were electrocuted in the South Carolina penitentiary early today for the murder of two Lexington County men.

They went to their deaths calmly and with prayers on their lips.

Almost two hours were required for the executions, each of which was watched by 16 persons in addition to newspapermen, physicians and penitentiary officials.

Four women were among the spectators at the electrocutions.

One of them was the widow of B. W. Hendrix. She showed no emotion as Cantrell, her husband's slayer, died.

Two others, daughters of C. D. Mills, saw their father's slayer electrocuted. They were Mrs. D. J. Vargeson and Mrs. E. E. Nason, both of Columbia.

The fourth woman was Mrs. Gray Raines, of Hartsville, who saw George Bird executed. Col. James Pearman, superintendent of the prison, said he had refused a request of Bird's mother that she be allowed to see her son die.

When Col. Pearman asked Pooser if he had anything to say after he had been strapped in the chair, and Pooser had replied negatively, Mrs. Nason spoke out:

"Pooser, you don't have anything to say to us?"

"No," he replied, and then he mumbled something about praying for him.

When Cantrell was led from the death house to the execution chamber there was a brief chanting of a plaintive Negro spiritual.

Henna-Haired Beauty's Life Forfeited to Seal Her Lips

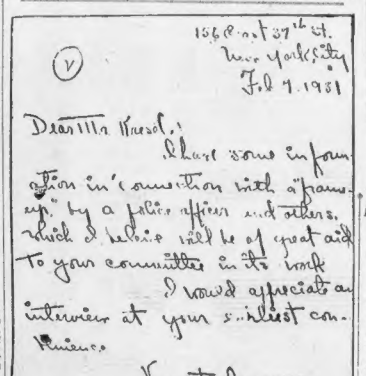

PHOTO AT TOP shows body of Vivian Gordon lying in e underbrush in Van Cortlandt Park, New York city, her hands clutching the end of the cord which strangled her. Below is the note she sent offering to reveal information in the vice and frameup inquiry and which police believe was the motive that led to her tragic end. (International Newsreel photos.)

Feb 7. 1931

Dear Mr. Russell:

I have some information in connection with a "frame-up" by a police officer and others, which I believe will be of great aid to your committee in its work. I would appreciate an interview at your earliest convenience.

Very truly yours
Vivian Gordon

VIVIAN GORDON, voluntary witness in Manhattan's probe of vice and "frameups," who was murdered before she had a chance to reveal the information she possessed. She was strangled and her body hurled from an automobile.

LOVE SLAYER IS BACK FOR TRIAL

Elizabeth, N. J., Feb. 27 (AP)—William Frazer of Rahway was brought back from Raleigh, N. C., today to tell more of the killing of Mrs. Phoebe Quick Stader, 35-year-old hairdresser, and male murder victim, with whom he had carried on a love affair.

Frazer denied the death was accidental in a confession he made to Prosecutor Abe J. David of Union County, who went to Raleigh to bring him back.

Insisting he still loved the woman, Frazer said a rifle he had in the back seat of his automobile was discharged as he reached for it, killing her as she sat beside him. They were returning from a jaunt into New York State and Frazer said both had been drinking.

Frazer was apprehended in Raleigh after the woman's body was found in the woods near Bowling Green, Va.

An autopsy revealed Mrs. Stader's body was badly mutilated when found. Frazer, when questioned, was fingering an engagement ring. David snatched it from him and asked whose it was. Frazer said he had taken it from the woman's finger to lessen possibility of identification.

He described how he had removed her clothes and burned them. Then he dragged the body from the car and left it in the woods.

DRUG DEN PUT UNDER PADLOCK

The Boston police won a victory today when a temporary injunction was issued in Superior court restraining owners of a house in Hudson st. from further maintaining or permitting it to be maintained as a drug nuisance.

In the case of premises in Tyler st., owned by the estate of the late William A. Gaston, also referred to as a drug nuisance, an agreement was reached to padlock the top floor for six months.

Atty. Leo Schwartz, counsel for Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman, who brought the actions, was told trustees of the Gaston estate had no knowledge drugs were used or sold in the Tyler st. building.

Atty. Schwartz, who filed bills in equity seeking restraining injunctions against owners of both houses, said they were drug nuisances. He showed that six narcotic convictions were obtained in one year against the Hudson st. premises.

Shew L. Wong, Wong Chung Yoke, Charles Wong, Harry Chin and the Quong Fat Co., were named defendants in the Hudson st. case. They were represented by Edward F. Flynn, former assistant district attorney of Essex County.

Action Is Postponed on Reapportionment

Washington, Feb. 27 (INS)—All bills to change the present law for reapportionment of congressional districts on the basis of the 1930 census were postponed indefinitely by the House census committee today. Autoist Loses His Way and Drives Into Subway

It was a case of "add laughs" in the Watertown entrance of the Harvard sq. subway late last night.

About 100 after-theater goers were grouped on the platform waiting for a surface car when a bumping and rattling sounded coming down the subway. To the surprise of everyone present, an automobile containing a lone driver bumped over the ties and pulled up at the platform.

Inspector James J. Donahue leaped into the car and forced the driver over in the seat, and backed the machine out of the subway. He continued to back out into Brattle sq. and up to the police station where he took the driver up to the desk. He gave his name as Clifford H. Blevens, 26, of Frost st., Cambridge, and the charge placed against him was driving under the influence of liquor.

OWNER SOUGHT FOR CARRYALL

Carryall enthusiasts learned with interest today that some careless carryaller lost his ancient carryall, with horse attached, early today in Somerville.

They were also puzzled to learn that the Somerville police carryall squad have been unable to locate the careless carryaller.

Carryall and dejected horse were found in Washington st., Somerville, after police had received an anonymous telephone call. The carryall squad clattered out and impounded the ancient combination.

Then the hunt began, via teletype, which goes to many stations, but no answer came back of a carryaller losing his carryall.

Burglar Hunt Ends When Police Find Trapped Mouse

When police hurried to 111 Chestnut st., Lynn, at 4 o'clock this morning in response to a call that there were burglars there, they were told they were just in time—that the robbers were still in the attic.

There were loud sounds of footsteps there, and the police hurried upstairs with drawn guns, while the four women who lived there shuddered in the doorways. A thorough search of the attic brought forth no sign of robbers.

Finally the cause of the "footsteps" was discovered. A rat had been caught in a trap and had been running over the floor, the trap giving the sound of men walking about.

Police killed the rat, and the women were satisfied that the "burglars" had not made away with anything.

GREEN BLAMES EMPLOYERS

Cleveland, Feb. 27 (AP)—President William Green of the American Federation of Labor said today that "unreasonable" attitudes on the part of some employers is giving a powerful boost to communism, despite the efforts of the federation to avoid it.

"Everywhere we hear business men discussing in apprehensive tones the 'Soviet menace'," Green said. "Now let me point out something.

"Unreasonable tactics tend to develop the communist spirit.

"It makes men rebel against the social order that allows employes of many years standing to be cast out of their jobs because they refuses to ign contracts that would leave them helpless and a prey to whatever conditions might be brought into existence."

N.Y. WORLD SALE ENDS SUNDAY EDITIONS

New York, Feb. 27 (AP)—The combined New York Telegram, Evening World and Morning World made its first appearance today.

The first edition, on the streets early this forenoon, carried the mastheads of all three newspapers, thus signalizing the end of the World newspapers as separately conducted by Joseph Pulitzer and his heirs for almost half a century and sold to the Scripps-Howard interests shortly after midnight.

NO MORE SUNDAY WORLD.

In its news story of the change, the combined World-Telegram announced that the Morning World and the Sunday World would not be published hereafter. The World-Telegram carried Associated Press dispatches and many of the departments that appeared in the old World. These include certain comics and the articles of some of the World special writers.

The old Telegram ran about 32 pages. The first edition of the World-Telegram had 44.

TELLS OF OWN DEATH

The Morning World was on the newsstands as usual, carrying ten columns telling about its own death, as well as a full report of all the other news of the day.

It has been customary for the World to print an "ear" on page one of its last edition each day. The "ear" said, "Final News Edition." Today it was just that.

The final edition of the Morning World was bringing a premium today. Newsstand operators boosted their prices to 10 or 15 cents. One dealer in the Grand Central area was asking a dollar. Few copies were available.

MILL STRIKERS RETURN IN LAWRENCE

dock were charged in four counts each with conspiracy in connection with the strike and were held in $20,000 each for the May term of the Essex County grand jury.

Alex Danilevich and John Czarnecki, local communist leaders, also were held each in $20,000 for the grand jury on conspiracy charges and additional charges of assault on a police officer.

Tahir Abraham, Angelo Cipolla, Ignazio Augusta, Carmine Vitale Morris Victor and Bruno Hellmere, all of Lawrence, were found guilty of disturbing the peace during yesterday's arrests but the cases were filed.

All of the latter group excepting Hellmere had been bailed, after arrest, by Rev. James A. McDonald, O. S. A., pastor of St. Mary's Church, who labeled Miss Berkman the "red flame" in a sermon last Sunday.

Police Capt. Michael A. Barry, prosecuting officer, told the court the police felt the men were swayed by emotion and he believed regretted their actions almost immediately.

DENOUNCED BY JUDGE

After a plea by Atty. William Maloney, counsel for Miss Berkman, Devine and Murdock, in which he charged yesterday's arrests were made to prevent leadership of strikers on the strike vote, Judge Frederic N. Chandler said:

"These people come into our city to flout the laws and they are the first to seek their protection when they get into the clutches of the law.

"They know the laws themselves and take every advantage of them."

He refused Maloney's plea for bail at $2000 each, but reduced the bail of $43,000 each set by police to $20,000 each.

Police kept the pickets moving at the Washington, Wood and Ayer mills where the workers returned. The officers were spurred by a "fight talk" given them by City Marshal Timothy J. O'Brien who threatened to read the seldom used riot act if trouble arose.

"Stand for no monkey business," he told the police before they went to the mills.

"If any trouble starts, I intend to read the riot act."

No trouble was experienced but a flurry of excitement attended the exit of 150 combers from the Washington mill a few hours after they had returned to work.

Rumors were rife that further trouble had arisen but officials explained that the recent idleness prevented providing work for the combers until next Monday.

WEAVERS TO RETURN

More than 250 weavers of the same mill failed to return, pending a wage question of their own, but later held a meeting at police headquarters and voted 183 to 71 to return to work Monday under the same conditions as the others.

The American Woolen Co. conceded the demands of the strikers for elimination of efficiency experts and the return of conditions in combing rooms to the basis as of before February 16.

It was on that day that orders for two men to run nine combs instead of the usual one man to two combs brought the beginning of the trouble.

Only 100 Millhands Join Maynard Strike

Maynard, Feb. 27—The call for a strike by 2500 employes of the Maynard Woolen Co. mill yesterday saw only 100 out today while officials of two unions fought for control of the workers.

James T. Reid, organizer for the Textile Workers' Union, issued the strike call yesterday. This union is not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

The United Textile Workers of America, affiliated with the A. F. of L., has not sanctioned a strike, but its leaders are at odds with mill agents over working agreements.

Now It's 'Get Out'

EDITH BERKMAN, Lawrence strike leader, rearrested with William Murdock on deportation warrants today after being released on bail of $20,000 pending grand jury hearing of conspiracy charges.

Wagner and Shoals Bills Are Preferred

Washington, Feb. 27 (AP)—President Hoover today referred the Muscle Shoals bill and the Wagner unemployment bill to interested departments for investigation and report. Proponents of the two measures in Congress have expressed fear that he may veto each.

The Muscle Shoals bill would provide for government power production and private production of fertilizer in the huge Alabama plants. The Wagner bill provides for the establishment of state employment agencies with the aid of federal funds.

Toronto Students Called "Atheists"

Toronto, Feb. 27 (AP)—That students at the University of Toronto are practical atheists is charged in the undergraduate newspaper Varsity. A meeting of officials was called to determine the action to be taken against the editors of the paper.

A. E. F. Allen, editor-in-chief, took full responsibility. A second editorial said:

"A practical atheist is one who in his daily living and attitude denies the existence of a deity.

"This latter attitude is that of the majority of the students of this university."

A Good Tire and a Good Idea met up at SEARS

here is the story of what happened . . .

Five years ago Sears, Roebuck and Co. had the plans all laid and skeleton organized for the most economical system of distribution ever devised.

But even with the system of distributing all ready, we didn't have a tire with which we were satisfied. So we called in the foremost engineers and tire designers of the country. We tore apart every tire then in existence and found out what made it good. We explored every process of tire construction then known, and developed many new ones. And we ended with the design and rubber compounds for a tire that was miles ahead of any ever offered the American public.

Then we went to the most successful tire manufacturer in the country, and had him build it for us, with the same exacting thoroughness that made his own tire extraordinary in quality. The result was a tire that is superlative beyond all dreams.

MOTHERS WHO ARE JAZZ MAD AID VICE RING

(In a third interview with Miss Pauline Bachelder, social worker, she tells of dancing mothers who are instrumental in leading their daughters into vice.)

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Jazz-mad mothers frequenting cheap restaurants of the dine and dance variety are making it easier for member of the vice ring to touch their home and reach their young girls.

Dancing mothers? Then dancing daughters!

Mothers bringing strange men into their home, while husbands are working at night, contaminate their young girls, and in this present age, according to Miss Pauline Bachelder, social worker, that condition is prevalent.

It may be modern to do that, but call it what you like, it spells ruination for young daughters," Miss Bachelder continued.

In the quiet of her office, the social worker was relating in detail the various agencies by which girls of high school age skid down the ladder of life.

She had talked of the perils of the dance halls and their menacing influence on young and unprotected school girls, their sources of all forms of infamy. She had attacked the viciousness of the "misunderstood" husband conspiracy to entice girls.

MOTHERS JAZZ-MAD

Today she turned her attention to the mothers, themselves, who, enslaved to the "jazzy" fastness of modern life, neglected home and family, and more particularly the decency and wholesomeness of their daughters. This makes a new approach for scouters of vice victims.

"We find the type of woman, whose husband works night, reckless and abandoned. With bleached hair to preserve what's left of her youth, painted and powdered, she sallies forth at night to seek the haunts of the young and to dance the hours away in frenzied delight.

"Such a mother, such a daughter. We must wake up mothers. Some are not mentally equipped to comprehend the situation and temptations that confront their young daughters. We must, therefore, educate these school girls, through the press, of the dangers that surround them.

"I am not one to say that a mother shouldn't go out, but the type of modern mother whose first impulse is to get rid of her young daughter, dress her up in clothes years older than her age, and send her out into the world on her own—is a menace to the community. Desirous only of furthering her own social ends, she sacrifices her daughter on the altar of good times.

RUSH GIRLS INTO LIFE

"The idea today is to shove out the young girl as quickly as possible. Dress them in long dresses, get them work and rush them out into life and off their hands—that is the wish of many modern mothers.

"It is the trend of the times. There is a general breaking down of the high moral standard, loosening up of all those ideals and principles and moralities that once were sacred."

Miss Bachelder condemned the present era of cheap jazz. She lamented the lack of sufficient recreational activity through which channel young girls may spend their surplus energy.

She deplored the lack of religious training, without which, she maintained, no girl can maintain a high moral standard.

WORKING GIRL EASY

"If vice continues to be made so easy and the number of victims continues to grow, the community must only blame itself for not properly educating parents to the demands of decency," Miss Bachelder continued.

"When a girl, who has left school after reaching the age of 14, goes to work, she becomes an easy prey for vice vultures. She is easily susceptible to offers of easy money. These youngsters don't have to be offered much. A little appears like a great deal to them. Of necessity, they must turn in their weekly salary. Along comes a man, well dressed, smooth-tongued, who paints a pretty picture of comfort and plenty money to spend. No wonder they fall.

"Modern mothers entertaining men while husbands are at work create a vice setting in their own home. Young girls comprehend the situation. One girl who came to me told me that she went out and repeated what she witnessed in her own home. She told of receiving money from her mother and her man friend and told to go away and stay out for several hours. Such situations are many and daughters suffer.

"If mothers are going to dance their lives away in cheap restaurants of the dine and dance variety, in cheap roadhouses, prolific sources of vice, young daughters are going to do the same, with even greater bravado and greater seriousness of result.

"All mothers aren't angels, yet we expect their daughters to be."

RENO MAY MAIL ITS DIVORCES

Reno, Nev., Feb. 27 (AP)—Rivalry among states to break Nevada's quick divorce monopoly continued today with the signature of Arkansas' governor to a 90-day divorce bill and Idaho's House of Representatives' indorsement on a similar measure.

In the face of this external attack, a "mail order divorce" bill prepared by Senator Duane Bush of Humboldt County (which receives little of Nevada's divorce business) brought embarrassment to Reno's legislators at Carson City.

Determined to maintain Nevada's pre-eminence, the latter sponsored a bill which would make six weeks' residence sufficient for the filing of a divorce petition.

"If the purpose," said Senator Bush, "is really to bring speedy comfort to the unhappily married, let us go the limit. My bill provides the divorce-seeker need only write a Nevada district judge of his or her intention, retain an attorney by mail and present evidence by deposition."

Governor Ross of Idaho said he planned "no sleep on the divorce bill at least one night."

Mrs. Maude Largent Cosho, representative from Ada county, said lack of gambling facilities prevented Idaho from competing with Nevada.

Gigolo to Be Yankee Institution, Says Professor

Evanston, Ill., Feb. 27 (US)—The Gigolo, the paid male dancing partner of France, soon will become an American institution—if he isn't already—Prof. W. F. Byron told his class in social pathology at Northwestern University.

"It shouldn't be degrading," the professor said. "There's a demand for men that they can fill. The time will come when the Gigolo will become an institution, a professional class in every civilized country."

Fern Setril Silent on Griffiths Suit

Los Angeles, Feb. 22—Fern Setril, 22, actress, has declined to discuss with Dist. Atty. Burton Fitts the $601,000 damage suit she filed against David Wark Griffith, film director, alleging attack.

Earl W. Taylor, a paroled convict, was held today. Dist. Atty Fitts said he had evidence Taylor and Mrs. Setril attempted to sell the "story" of the case prior to filing of the suit.

Java Sugar Exports Cut

Batavia, Java, Feb. 27 (AP)—The government today introduced a bill temporarily restricting sugar exports which under the measure would be banned entirely without government permission.

28 'ONE LIGHT' DRIVERS FINED

Twenty-eight motorists were fine $5 each today in the traffic session of municipal court by Judge Francis P. Good upon complaint of Traffic Officer Charles Hull.

Each dewendant had been stopped on Beacon st. for driving with only one headlight.

"The registrar of motor vehicles and the newspapers have constantly warned you about the menace of one light," Judge Good charged the defendants. "You know that one light confuses the driver coming from the opposite direction because he can't tell whether it is an auto or a motorcycle.

Lafayette Inn Is Destroyed by Fire

Worthington, Feb. 27 (AP)—Lafayette Inn, formerly known as Worthington Inn, for 35 years a well-known summer resort hotel in the Hampshire hills, was wiped out early today by fire of unknown origin that menaced the village, as the flames were blown by a brisk wind. The home of Leland Cole also was destroyed.

The loss on the Inn is estimated at $50,000 and on the Cole house at $5000. The hotel was owned by F. O. Wells of Greenfield.

'Excuse Us Please, Mr. Simmons!'

"We're really sorry, Mr. Simmons, to have to do this, because we know how much it irks you to have anybody sell your excellent nationally advertised Beds below their usual selling price—particularlyat about half-price. But we're sure you'll forgive us when you hear our story. Do you remember all those high-grade Beds that you've had a surplus of in your Boston Warehouse because you've discontinued making these numbers? Well, we bought all of those Beds last week—and we bought them pretty cheap. You can't blame us for passing along these savings to the public—now can you? We realize that Simmons Beds aren't offered below standard prices very often—and if it weren't for the fact that we bought them at a tremendous discount, we never would have offered them at cut prices. Perhaps you can gain a little comfort in knowing that we went out to other nationally known Bedding Makers and had them give us some special merchandise at lower prices, too—and we're including this in this great Bed and Bedding Sale, also! $30,000 BANKLOOT TOSSED AWAY

A Reporter's Story of the Famous Somersworth, N. H., Bank Murder

WHEN JOSEPH KELLY, dressed as a woman, arrived in Montreal, he asked a taxi operator to drive to a place where "she" could get a nice room and a drink. A woman ran the place. She saw men's shoes under that long skirt. The police were tipped. Arrest followed. Joe by this time had but one suitcase. The other containing about $30,000 was heaved from a train window. Imagine the thrill as a tramp found it.

(In April, 1897, someone entered the Somersworth National Bank at Somersworth, N. H., murdered Cashier Joseph Stickney and escaped with $60,000. In covering that crime the writer, together with Reporters Forrest Hull, Elias McQuaid and John W. Carberry, uncovered evidence fastening the murder and robbery upon a young man named Joseph Kelly. Kelly made his escape to Montreal, where, attired as a woman, he was arrested. Today's story reveals what became of the money and the punishment the slayer underwent.)

By DAN W. GALLAGHER

(who worked on the case as a reporter)

Following the arrest, I set out for Montreal. Upon arriving in that city, I found that Kelly was in the custody of Chief of Detectives Carpenter. The prisoner was still wearing women's clothing when I interviewed him in his cell. Only $30,000 of the money had been recovered.

"What did you do with the rest of it?" I asked.

"Well," said Kelly, "I spent less than $100 of that remaining $30,000. As to the rest of it, I just opened a window on the train and chucked it out."

"Do you mean to tell me that you got rid of some $29,000 in that way?"

"Sure I do. It was in one of the suitcases. I wanted that money and then, after I had killed a man to get it, I didn't know what to do with it. The police here say I am lying when I say that I heaved that suitcase with nearly $30,000 in it, out that train window. All the same, that's just what I did with it. The other suitcase, with the other $30,000 in it, I held on to.

"I had a room on the third floor of the building across from the bank. It was so I could keep tabs on the best time to do up Stickney and get the money. I saw Miss Beckwith (Stickney's assistant) set out for lunch. After she reached the street, I went over, entered the bank on the second floor, gave Stickney a forged order for stamps, made out in the name of the postmaster of North Berwick, and the cashier never suspected anything was wrong.

KILLS STICKNEY

"He went down to the vault to get the stamps. I kicked in the gate that blocked my way to the cashier's section. Stickney heard the rumpus and came up on the hotfoot. I had a razor ready and killed him. He went down right in back of that gate. I got his keys and locked the door and pulled down the curtain. But I made the mistake of taking that key out of the lock. After that, I went into the bank vault and began to pile money into the bag I had brought along. That bag was made up of two pillow slips, one inside the other.

"After I got all the money in sight, I couldn't find the right key to that door. I tried several on the key ring, but it was no go. So, just to save time, I crashed the glass in the door with the money bag, climbed through and made my getaway. Before leaving the bank I put on a false mustache. I went up the hill behind the bank, put the money bag at the foot of an apple tree, went over to my rooming place, got a couple of suitcases, came back, got half the swag in one and half in the other, then had a North Berwick livery man drive me over to Rochester, where I got aboard the train for Montreal.

"On the way up here I got off at a little town, went to a hotel, got a room, then went out and bought this dress and hat and all the other women's duds I'm wearing. Then, after shaving, I got into those togs, drew a heavy veil down over my features and continued my journey up here by train. I wonder who in thunder found the money I tossed out of that car window. Perhaps it hasn't been found, at that. Just think of getting your hands on all that money, then not know what to do with it. I thought no one would ever suspect me."

"How did they happen to arrest you?" I asked.

"My boots gave me away," he replied. "I meant it to appear I was an old woman. I acted the part mighty fine, too. One of the trainmen helped me down the steps when the train reached Montreal. I have been told that there were a lot of officers at the station—all on the watch for a fellow answering my description. But I fooled them, you see, by dressing up as an old woman. Not one of them thought that the old lady that had such a hard time getting off that train because she was afflicted with rheumatism was the fellow they were after.

SHOES A GIVEAWAY

"I told the porter I wanted to get a cab. He carried my suitcase. When I got in the cab, the driver asked me where I wanted to go. I said to him: 'Now, young fellow, you needn't be surprised when I tell you where I want you to take me. Fact is, I want you to take me to a place where I can get a drink. I don't want to go to a saloon; some other kind of place where they sell liquor. Don't you know anybody who sells it on the sly—a sort of a quiet place where I can have a few drinks and get a room, if I want to put up there?' 'Sure,' says he, 'I can fix you up fine and dandy. I know the very place you are looking for. No one will disturb you. A woman runs it. And she sells good stuff.

"The home he took me to was run by a woman named Minnie Ashton. It was a well-furnished place. I told her I hailed from New York. There was a big room there, one with tables in it. And I sat there and had a few drinks. The stuff went to my head. Others came in, both men and women, and I treated them. The Ashton woman didn't know what to make of me, I guess—an old woman starting in on a sort of lost. She tried to get me to tell her a lot more about myself. But I wouldn't do it. Well, I must have been there about four hours when two men showed up and told me I'd have to go with them. I learned later that Minnie Ashton had noticed men's shoes peering out from under my skirts—and that was enough for her.

"She called up Chief Carpenter and told him about me. And he sent those officers of his to bring me in. Even before they asked me to explain who I was, they opened up that suitcase when we reached the chief's office. And, right off the reel, the chief told me that my name was Joe Kelley and that I was wanted for murder and robbery at Somersworth. So, there being nothing else to do, I owned up. That's all there is to it."

JAILED 30 YEARS

Developments in regard to the missing suitcase and its treasure followed. It seems that a tramp, walking along the track, found that suitcase. Had it contained a couple of shirts and a pair of trousers, he'd have thanked his lucky stars and gone on his way rejoicing. But nearly $30,000 at one fell stroke! Ah, that was a different matter. He was as honest as the day is long and turned the money over to the authorities. Someone gave him a $5 note as a reward. This pleased him exceedingly. He knew what to do with a five-spot, even though he didn't know what to do with $30,000.

They occasionally tried murderers in those days the way they quite frequently try murderers now. Kelly faced a New Hampshire jury. Just before the defense was to open some sort of a dicker was made. As a result of it he was sentenced to serve 30 years in the state prison at Concord.

JAPANESE HOPE IMPERIAL BABE WILL BE BOY

Tokyo, Feb. 27 (AP)—An "interesting event" of paramount concern to the 90,000,000 subjects of the Emperor of Japan is expected within a few days, for the birth of an infant that may become the sovereign of the empire should take place about March 10.

The Empress Nagako is about to present her consort, Emperor Hirohito, with a son or a daughter, and in the imperial palace preparations for the expected arrival have taken precedence over everything else.

Even if the little mite of the blood imperial is a girl there will be nation-wide rejoicing for the safety of the empress and her baby, but the celebrations will not be so extensive as if it is a prince to be welcomed.

In either case, however, there will be ceremonies to announce the birth in the three shrines of the imperial palace. Imperial messengers will carry the tidings to the ruin goddess at her main shrine at Ise.

To the nation the happy event will be announced by radio broadcast.

The baby must wait seven days for a name, which will be selected by the emperor himself from a list submitted by the court historian.

U. S. WIFE SUES RICH BARONET

Washington, Feb 27 (AP)—After a night in custody of federal officers, Sir Charles L. Ross, wealthy Scottish baronet, today was arranging for a $100,000 bond in a suit for maintenance brought by his wife, Lady Patricia Ross.

The suit was filed yesterday with a plea for high bail to prevent Sir Charles leaving the court's jurisdiction.

Lady Ross, daughter of Andrew Ellison of Louisville, Ky., said her husband was a multi-millionaire with 300,000 acres of land in Scotland, extensive holdings in Canada and the United States and manufacturer-inventor of the Ross rifle, once used by the Canadian army.

They were married in Louisville in 1901. In 1924, Sir Charles sought a divorce but his petition was denied because as a British subject he was not under the jurisdiction of the Louisville court. In 1928 he obtained a divorce in Sonora, Mexico.

Last year, Lady Ross alleged, he became infatuated with a New York woman. Divorce proceedings in England ended in a decision by the House of Lords in favor of Sir Charles.

Sir Charles said today he had established several years ago a trust fund for his wife under which she receives $5000 a year.

G.O.P. IN BATTLE OVER CONTROL OF DELEGATES

The fight of the Republican State committee to deliberate John Richardson, intimate friend of President Hoover in party affairs, will be renewed March 9 before the legislative committee on election laws at a public hearing on a bill designed to make a free-for-all of the presidential primary next year.

The bill, drawn under the direction of the Republican State committee, was presented on petition of Senator James G. Moran of Mansfield, who admitted that he is unfamiliar with its provisions.

The measure would provide for the repeal of that section of the general laws which requires that a prospective delegate pledged to the nomination of any specific candidate for President have the writer assent of the candidate he would support.

In 1928 President Hoover as a candidate for the nomination delegated the authority to approve delegates to Richardson.

It is conceded that the President again would delegate the same authority to Richardson.

While the procedure of the state committee could be interpreted as an unfriendly gesture to President Hoover, it actually was prepared to prevent Richardson from obtaining control of the delegation which will elect the next national committeeman from this state.

Neither Richardson nor Amos L. Taylor, chairman of the state committee, was willing to discuss the bill today, but it is believed that the legislative leaders of the Republican party already have promised to use their influence in obtaining its passage.

For some time now it has been widely known that Richardson is opposed to some of the policies of Louis K. Liggett, Republican national committeeman from Massachusetts.

Wall St. Flayed for Bonus Opposition

Editor Boston American:

It is interesting to note that representatives of Wall Street are loud in their protests against the proposal to cash the adjusted compensation certificates now held by World War veterans.

First the opponents of this measure resorted to camouflage by attempting to use the American Legion as a tool to stop the proposal. Then, when the veterans arose almost as one man in their denunciation of and trickery, and when the public everywhere expressed a sentiment in favor of justice for the veteran, the "big-moneyed interests" were forced out into the open. Never in the history of the world have the greedy, selfish interests which create wars more clearly shown their true colors.

These selfish interests do not hesitate to shoot their lying propaganda against some foreign nation in order to gain the moral support of our people. They do not show a trace of shame when millions of men march away to be slaughtered and maimed for life. They have no consideration for the broken families and the suffering involved in a depression which is the aftermath of their war for selfish gain.

Who is it that opposes the proposal of the American Legion calling for a universal draft of capital as well as blood and limbs during future wars, if they must come? Of course, Wall Street favors that legislation—Oh, yah!

How long are the people of America going to put up with this dictation from Wall Street? How long are we going to fall for the propaganda of financiers?

Here's one buddy who intends to keep alive in the memories of all with whom he comes in contact in this life the truth as he has experienced it regarding Wall Street war propaganda. I paid the price of their rottenness and deceit, and I'm still paying with a total and permanent disability.

The propagandists now say that if the "bonus" is cashed at this time the disabled men will suffer. Every disabled veteran knows that many of these same propagandists were the same group who delayed justice for the disabled in past years when men have died for lack of adequate treatment and care.

State Prison Stories Praised by Ex-Senator

Editor Boston American:

I have read with much interest and satisfaction, the very thorough and careful discussion of the situation at the Charlestown State Prison by your Alan Frazer.

Ten years ago I went into the question with hammer and tongs when the conditions were the same as they now are, except at present they are more emphasized by the crowded condition. My recollection is that when I first looked into the matter there were a'out 800 in the place. The actual condition of Charlestown has never been set forth so clearly, in the press, at least, as you have done it in this instance.

Through these articles you have done a service to your day and generation. I was at the prison about 10 days ago and can corroborate everything you have said. Now the thing to do is, of course, to get that appropriation for the completion of Norfo'k, and if you can lend any assistance along that line, you will be doing a real service to the state.

LEWIS PARKHURST,
(Former State Senator from Winchester.)

Two men, a father and son, were burned about the hands and arms today in an unsuccessful attempt to save two cars from a flaming garage in the rear of their home at 379 Hitchborn st., Revere.

Royal Denney, 18, and Carmelino Gemma, 23, both of Lynn, pleaded guilty to robbery of a gas station of that city while armed and were each held in $10,000 bail for the Grand Jury by Judge Phillip Kiley in Lynn District Court today. Their companion, William Kenney, 22, of Lynn was held in the same bonds yesterday. Gemma's wife and their five months old baby were in court today. Mrs. Gemma collapsed with the child in her arms during the hearing. She was carried from the court room and revived.

A loaded revolver was found in a trunk in Gemma's home, Greenwood rd., when police arrested him. The weapon was turned over to Somerville police, who are comparing the grooves in the barrel with those in the bullets which fatally injured Louis Bagni and killed his dog at his gasoline station Sunday.

This trio pleaded guilty to robbing the Lynn gasoline station of Alfred Haines on Wednesday.

Only slo-baked Double-Milk bread can make such perfect toast.

EVERYONE knows that milk is highly nourishing. That's why we put Double-Milk in every loaf of Wonder-Cut Bread—pour it in generously. Every drop pure. Every drop pasteurized. The kind of milk that youngsters grow on—the good, wholesome milk that keeps grown-ups strong, healthy, happy.

Yes, milk in bread is of the utmost importance. But we're just as careful with every other ingredient, too. We shop America for its choicest wheat. Then mill the very hearts to get our superfine flour. Add sugar, shortening, salt, yeast, as pure as any you use in your own kitchen.

Blended by the Wonder recipe—the only recipe that makes perfect bread. Then slo-baked by the exclusive Wonder extra-time process that bakes every bit of every slice clear through to the very heart of the loaf.

Double-Milk! Perfect ingredients! And Slo-baking! An unbeatable combination, you'll agree. But Wonder-Cut wins on still another point—it's sliced for jiffy-quick serving.

Slicing saves you steps. Does away with scattered crumbs and bothersome bread knives. Makes Wonder-Cut instantly ready for table, toast, or sandwiches.

Reason enough why Wonder-Cut is replacing home-baked bread and ordinary loaves by the thousands. Reason enough why scores of families right in your neighborhood are making a regular mealtime and in-betweentime habit of Wonder-Cut Bread. And reason, too, we think, why you'll want to write "Wonder-Cut" on tomorrow's shopping list in good big letters! Fresh at your grocer's twice each day.

Monte Carlo, Feb. 27—Beautiful clothes worn by beautiful women, warm sunshine, a blue sea and a blue sky may be all that a man needs to be happy, but woman has a worry she may never forget—her figure.

Hereabouts the vogue today to keep the figure is to sip tangerine juice as an aperitif. Tangerine enthusiasts count among their number the Countess of Seafield and Lady Cecil Doubleday.

Golf, of course, is another method. The Mont Agel course shows the city, with its remarkable view, is becoming more popular daily as a gathering place.

Mrs. Oswald Davidson was there for golf and luncheon in a sporting costume of two shades of blue. Mrs. Alfred Lyndall wore a dark green cloth skirt and jacket with chiffon blouse.

Bridge enthusiasts, however, have their innings. Mrs. Charles Bancroft of New York entertained 14 tables at the Hotel De Paris. She wore an elegant black and white ensemble.

At the Hotel De Paris Sir Ernest and Lady Wills entertained the Baron Orcey, and Mr. and Mrs. E. Phillips Oppenheim. Lady Wills was gowned in gray velvet, and wore a rope of pearls.

A. Kingsley Macomber's party included Admiral and Mrs. Long, Caroline Nash, and Prince and Princess Radziwill. Others present were Mr. and Mrs. Berry Wall and Mr. and Mrs. Chauncy Olcott.

Take no chances— Specify Kotex for lasting sanitary protection

FOR true comfort, true ease of mind, your sanitary protection must be secure, well-fitted, soft and dainty. Kotex gives you just that sort of protection.

Kotex absorbs, not in one concentrated spot, but over the entire surface. Yet the protective edges remain dry and comfortable for hours. You've no idea what a difference that makes.

It can be worn on either side with the very same protection, the same comfort, for it is equally absorbent on either side.

Hospitals use quantities of Kotex. They recognize its superiority. Doctors and nurses recommend this modern sanitary protection and women who have once used it never go back to other methods.

It is disposable, as you know, easily and quickly. It deodorizes. It is adjustable. All sores have it.

SHOE INDUSTRY GAINS IN NEW ENGLAND

Washington, Feb. 27 (US)—A rapid upturn in the shoe industry of New England was reported today by Col. Arthur Woods, chairman of the President's emergency employment committee.

William Phillips, his New England field agent, wired that shoe factories are reopening, that some of them have returned to normal operations and others are running night and day.

INCREASE STAFFS

All have increased their staff to keep up with the incoming orders, Phillips said.

"This report sounds like boom times," Woods commented to assembled newspapermen, "but don't run out and gamble on the stock market on the strength of this one report."

Phillips also reported that some of the Connecticut silk companies were running with a double shift.

Woods said he has received reports that 119,770 men were employed on road work in the 48 states.

This is more than the number normally employed in roads in January.

30 MILLIONS FOR ROADS

The reports also indicate that road contracts in 36 states call for an expenditure of more than $30,000,000.

Woods expects the February report to show even more men and money at work on roads than in January. He figures additional contracts signed this month will require another $30,000,000.

Woods also reported that construction divisions of 48 states are planning the expenditure of $1,065,000,000 this year for state buildings and state highways.

"For three years I suffered with rheumatic pains in my shoulders, arms, and back of my neck. In addition to the agonies of rheumatism, I was troubled with indigestion and constipation. I had a burning sensation in my stomach, and my system was covered with poisons and impurities but now, thanks to Konjola, everything is different. I noticed a change while using the first bottle, the rheumatic pains began to ease, digestion improved, and in a short time constipation was entirely corrected. Today I can eat anything, and all pains are gone. I would not be without Konjola in my home."

War Memoirs of Marshal Foch

AMERICANS PLUNGE INTO THE BATTLE OF THE ARGONNE

By MARSHAL FERDINAND FOCH,
Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Armies During the Closing Phases of the World War.

Translated from the French by Col. T. Bentley Mott.

THE FRANCO-AMERICAN manoeuvre of September, 1918 was so prepared that it could be extended, according to the march of events from the Meuse to the Aisette. These orders as now perfectly worked out, satisfied me, except for the parts which limited the advance of each army with the purpose of assuring better liaison between them. Thus restriction offered the risk of preventing a priori the favorable exploitation of opportunities that might arise and impairing the ardor of the troops; this must be at any cost and under all circumstances be maintained intact.

My preoccupation over this point led me on September 25 to draw up the following note:

"The nature and importance of the operation undertaken for the 26th requires that all its advantages be followed up without the slightest delay; that the rupture of the line of resistance be exploited uninterruptedly to as great a depth as possible; for this reason, halts in the development of the action must be avoided.

"This applies especially to the advance of the American Army between the Meuse and the French Fourth Army. As the strength of this army relieves it from all risks, it must, without further instructions and upon the initiative of its commander, push forward its advance as far as possible.

"The American Army therefore must endeavor before all else to press its advance as far and as promptly as possible in the direction of Buzancy.

"The French Fourth Army is to cover the American Army by advance toward the Aisne near Rethel, and this must be executed with similar speed, resolution and initiative. The Fourth Army must in all cases endeavor to maintain liaison with the American Army, but under no circumstances must it slow up the march of the latter, which remains the deciding factor.

"Hence there must be no question of determining for these armies fronts they are to reach but not pass, unless they get further orders; such restrictive instructions would tend to prevent fully exploiting favorable circumstances which may arise and impair the ardor of attack—a thing to be maintained above all else."

The Marshal commanding-in-chief of the Allied Armies counts upon a spirit of devotion and initiative in each of these armies.

"The General commanding-in-chief of the armies of the north and northeast will please make the strongest possible appeal to this spirit."

Foe Balked
Pressed at All Points, He Can Not Organize Battle

This message was followed by a second, dated the 27th. It dealt with the principles which, under the conditions then existing, should guide the decisions of commanding officers of all grades.

"At the point which has now been reached in our affairs surprise and extensive attacks launched by us on the enemy compel him to immediately parry our blows when and as he can in order to support his troops occupying the line.

"They prevent him from bringing up units in proper form capable of waging a well-ordered battle, and from assembling artillery and infantry in a defensive position of any considerable extent and prepared in advance—in short, prevent him from conducting any battle on a large scale, even a defensive one.

"Hence, if we do not give him time enough to pull himself together we shall be confronted everywhere with nothing but disorganized units mixed up together.

"The use of numerous machine guns can undoubtedly slow up or cover the enemy's retreat; but they do not suffice to create a solid defensive system, and, at all events, small organizations properly manoeuvering can get the better of any such methods.

"This being the situation, our attacks must constantly seek to break through; for this purpose attacking groups composed of infantry and artillery should be formed for advancing against objectives, the capture of which will break down the enemy's front.

"The issue once more hinges upon the activity of commanders and the endurance of the troops; the latter is never found wanting whenever an appeal is made to it."

The Allied offensive operations "B" and "C" were started by the American First Army at 5:30 a. m., September 26, and by the French Fourth Army, at 5:25 a. m., following a violent artillery preparation. Sensible gains were at once obtained between the Meuse and the Suippe; along the entire attacking front the enemy's first line was captured, and, at several points, passed. The average advance of our troops was from two to three miles.

Americans Halt
Squeezed Into Narrow Corridor and Held Up for Days

During the 27th and 28th the enemy's resistance stiffened. The American First Army, annoyed by flanking fire in the Argonne, was brought to a standstill around Apremont.

On September 29, the French Fourth Army succeeded in overrunning the line of the Py and driving the enemy back upon a second position between Somme-Py and Monthois.

But on this side, the American Army, squeezed into the narrow corridor between the Meuse and Argonne, opposed by a resistance which was all the stronger because favored by difficult, broken country and hampered in its advance by flanking fire both from the Argonne and from the east bank of the Meuse, continued to mark time.

To remedy this situation, I decided, in agreement with Gen. Pétain, to withdraw a certain number of divisions from the American sector of attack and to use them in part east of the Meuse and in part west of the Argonne.

On September 30, the Fifth Army made a surprise attack between the Vesle and the Aisne, and, despite strong enemy resistance, forced the Germans back. Continuing its offensive on October 1, it obtained even more valuable results than the day before, compelling its adversary to cross to the east bank of the Aisne-Marne Canal, from Berry-au-Bac to La Neuvillette, leaving behind 2500 prisoners and some 30 cannon.

Simultaneously, the Fourth Army, aided by the American Second Division, attacked and carried the strong German positions on the heights south of Orfeuil, capturing said solid points of support as Notre Dame des Champs and Blanc Mont, and taking 18,000 prisoners with 200 cannon (October 1 and 2).

This double success was not long in bearing fruit. During the 5th, 6th and 7th of October, the Germans carried out an extensive retrograde movement, northeast of Rheims, establishing themselves behind the Suippe and the Line of the Aisne.

Meanwhile, on October 4, the American First Army resumed its attacks. Its left and center, advancing along the whole line in the Argonne, reached Apremont, Exermont and Gesnes. Its right, hampered by the German flanking positions on the heights east of the Meuse, advanced only slightly.

It became absolutely necessary to suppress these flanking positions by capturing the cliff from Dun-sur-Meuse to Damvillers. During the days, October 8-10, the French XVII Corps, aided by two American Divisions (33d and 29th), began operations on the right bank of the Meuse and, after heavy fighting, got possession of the line Sivry-sur-Meuse-Feaumont.

Through not having been a lustily conducted, the battle under way presented some confusion. Those in command, too distant from the action, did not seem "to personally push it with the utmost energy, by themselves supervising the execution of their combinations."

Therefore, General Pétain was asked to give instructions to the High Command (commanders of groups of armies and armies) with a view to ensuring at the present stage of the war of movement a personal and active direction of the battle on the terrain itself on designated days. Encourage, inspire, watch over, supervise, still remains its chief [illegible].

Thus oriented, the attacks along the whole front were resumed Oct. 8. While the American First Army, having cleared the Argonne, reached the defiles south of Grandpre and captured the heights of Romagne and of Cunel. The French Fourth Army, attacking in force in the direction of Cauroy-Machault, gained a footing on the north bank of the Aisne and on the north bank of Monthois. On its left the Fifth Army assaulted and forced the passage of the Suippe between Aguilcourt and Saint-Etienne, while north of the Aisne the Tenth Army, driving forward in its turn, carried the line of the Ailette, and gained the heights of Verny-en-Laonnois and of Jumigny.

These threatening advances struck the enemy a heavy blow. On the 11th, 12th and 13th of October he found himself obliged to execute a wide movement in retreat along the entire front comprised between the Aisne at Vouziers and the Oise at La Fère, and falling back on the strong position (Hunding Stellung and Brunehild Stellung) established along the general line La Fresnoy - sur - Serre, Solsons- (Chaourse)-Corbeny and the valley of the Aisne below Grandpre.

On Oct. 16, the Franco-American armies established, pursuant with this position and made immediate disposition for assaulting it.

GIRLS WILL AID GRAND JURY VICE PROBE

Scorpio Is 'Put on Spot' by Own Gang to Further a Rum Deal With Colimo

"YOU DON'T have to worry—I'll take care of anyone who tries to hijack that load," said Scorpio.

How the Story Started

Louie Scorpio, called "Slaughterhouse," champion steer killer of the stockyards and winner of the revolver prize at the butchers' annual picnic, decided to join the bootleg rush by Johnny Franks. His decision was clinched by the frame-up appearance at Franks' cafe of "Peaches," a beauty of the underworld. The gang invades the territory of Joe Colimo, a rival racketeer, with a truckload of beer. Fight ensued in which Colimo's brother is killed.

CHAPTER 7

"Colimo Seeks Killer"

"SLAUGHTERHOUSE" expanded under this praise. Out came his chest. He began to strut and spoke boastfully.

"You don't have to worry—I'll take care of anybody that tries to hijack that load," he promised. "Just let me fill up the old gat."

He turned to the table. His ever-present bottle of milk stood beside the drinks of the others. He drank half of it.

"Leave the rest here—I'll finish it after we unload the boat," he said as he departed.

Newton eyed Franks for a moment, then slipped his brandy again.

"We are protected now—if what I think is going to happen does happen."

Colimo Arrives

Johnny Franks looked at him questioningly. Newton only smiled.

Vronski interrupted. He had gone to the wicket in the door, in answer to a knock, and now turned with alarm on his face.

"Colimo is downstairs with his gang. He wants to see Franks."

"You guys get behind that screen and handle the choppers. Vronski, bring Colimo up."

Again Newton grinned.

Colimo, ushered in by Vronski, looked far from the debonair Colimo the city was used to seeing. Disheveled, with staring eyes, he glared at Newton and Franks.

"Better watch your step, Colimo," came with quiet menace from Franks. "We got two choppers on you, behind the screen."

Colimo looked. It was true. Two machine-guns nosed out of holes in the screen. The visitor shrugged his shoulders. "I didn't get your brother, Joe," went on Franks nervously. "Honest, I didn't."

Eyed Each Other

"No—Rinse and you didn't," responded Colimo. "But what I want to know is—who did? That's all I'm here for—the man who got my brother."

Newton's eyes flickered. As he caught the eye of Johnny Franks, he let his gaze wander to the table—to the bottle of milk. Johnny nodded understandingly.

"You mean," he inquired of Colimo, "that you'll lay off and call this thing square—just to get the one man? I'm sorry about your brother, Joe—"

"Never mind stalling," cut in the other "There's just one thing I want. I want to get the guy myself.

"Who killed my brother?"

Franks and Colimo eyed each other warily as two boxers in the ring. Newton, sitting back in his chair, regarded them a little contemptuously. He poured more brandy into the wide glass, warmed it again with his hands, inspired its aroma.

"Colimo," he said, "you might as well get us right. The mob muscled in on your territory tonight, and they'll probably do it again. That's part of the racket. This town is getting too small for us, and we are going to expand. We're getting up in the world.

"That's all business. We are perfectly willing to take our chances with your mob anytime. But we didn't intend to kill that boy tonight. You realize that."

Colimo nodded. There was logic in what the lawyer said. And, too, Ivan had observed, when he went with Kruse and the rest. He considered wavered, then—

"Just the same, I want to get the guy who bumped him off—crook with my own hands. After that, we can talk about other business."

Newton nodded.

"Get me right—if we turn up the man who bumped Ivan, that's all you want? That settles everything about tonight's affair?"

"Right," said Colimo.

"You fellows have the milk dealers, the laundry men, and the garage men all paying in," went on Newton.

"Yes—and we're organizing the Building Contractors' Protective Association now," added Colimo. "But what has that to do with the guy who bumped Ivan?"

Organized

"Just this," responded Newton. "Here in Centre we have all our business organized. We have a big supply of beer coming in, as well as 10 stills turning out silky and hootch. The booze racket brings in the biggest quick profits, but the other is steady and reliable, and ought to be nursed along.

"I had been thinking of talking this thing over with you," went on Newton. "I have figured out a way to make it look legal—make it look like legitimate business—and we can get away with throwing a pineapple or two. We

CHELSEA MAN CONVICTED AND FINED

Vanishing of Lodging House Register Pages Is Explained to Court

Several girls of school age who have supplied the authorities with information on vice conditions and vice ring activities in Boston will appear before the Suffolk county grand jury on Monday.

This announcement was made at the courthouse today following appearance of two Dorchester girls and 17 years old, in Municipal Court, where they testified against Murice Mack of Chestnut st Chelsea.

Mack was found guilty of a statutory offense and fined $15, one of the girls testifying that she accompanied him to a South End lodging house where she was registered as his wife. The other girl corroborated her story, which Mack denied.

MACK PAYS $10 FINE

The Chelsea man paid the fine, however. He was found not guilty of violation of the true name law.

The girls testified they were introduced to Mack by Max Hoffenberg, who has been sentenced to state prison on charges involving these two girls and one other, 15 years old.

Sidney Winston, young State st. lawyer, was arraigned before Judge Michael H. Sullivan in Dorchester district court today on a statutory charge, but the case was continued to March 4 on request of his attorney, who said time was needed to get a certain shill witness.

Asst Dist Atty Daniel J Gleason interviewed all the girls today in preparation for presentation of evidence to the grand jury, and also conferred with Miss Kathryn Gurnly, probation officer of Roxbury court; Miss Pauline Bachelder, agent for the Society for Prevention of Cruelty of Children, and Special Officers Hart and Douglas.

Twelve persons in all have been arrested in connection with the investigation, which started with information given by the two girls who appeared against Mack today and the sister of one of them. Names of the girls are withheld because of their ages.

GIRL'S OWN STORY.

The 17-year-old Dorchester girl told the following story before Judge Dowd in municipal court at trial of Mack:

"On the afternoon of Jan. 3, my girl chum and I kept a date with Max Hoffenberg and were taken by him to a radio store at Upham's Corner, where we were introduced to this man (the defendant).

"After a little while we all went to a house on Massachusetts ave., where I was registered as this man's wife. We were assigned a room and later Hoffenberg and my chum were assigned to the same room."

BILLY SUNDAY PRAISES JESUS

After almost two weeks of attacking the devil, Billy Sunday at his noon-time evangelistic meeting in Tremont Temple today left off his haranguing and tongue-lashing to devote his sermon to a calm praise of God and the Christ.

The usually dynamic Billy Sunday spoke in a quiet voice.

"Jesus shall be called wonderful.

"Think of how He came in lowliness when He could easily have arrived with the pomp and glory of a king. Recall how He suffered when He could have escaped His agony.

"He must be called wonderful. Would a human man have ordered what Jesus went through for us! No, He was the Son of God, the Saviour of the World and is to be called wonderful."

'DENTIST' HIT A MOTHER SAVES NERVE; FINED ANOTHER DIES

Peter Nottis always liked to tinker with teeth, so he hung out his shingle as a dentist at 170 Tremont st. without getting a license to pursue his favorite sport.

He came to grief when he hit a nerve in a sensitive patient's mouth and was investigated by Special Officer Daniel Curran and taken into municipal court today by Lieut. Robert Caverly.

Anna Cronin of Dorchester testified before Judge Dowd that she had acted as Nottis' secretary, sending out correspondence signed "Dr." Nottis.

Several patients testified to having received clumsy dental "relief" from Nottis.

He was fined $100 and told he could pay $200 but given time to pay.

Lenten Prayer

Fishing

(Read Luke 5.1-11. Text, Luke 5.10) Fear not; from henceforth thou shalt catch men.

What a promotion! From one of the humblest of callings to that which is the greatest! And yet Peter's undoubted talent had been well schooled in the art to which he was to give the remainder of his life. The patience required, the hazards encountered, the persistence called for, these had all been excellent training for the work before him. Peter was still to be a fisher, but a fisher of men. He had just shown a readiness to try again after repeated failure. How often he would need that heroic quality in the years ahead! We also are to be fishers of men. Do we know the art? Or do we thresh the waters to frighten the fish away? "Being crafty, I caught you with guile," said Paul. After failure will we try again? For Peter, fishing was not a pastime; it was business. We are much too casual in our practice of the great art. Only wet nets catch fish.

PRAYER: Increase, O God, the faith and the zeal of all thy people, that they may more earnestly desire, and more diligently seek, the salvation of their fellowmen, through the message of thy love in Jesus Christ our Lord. In his name. Amen.

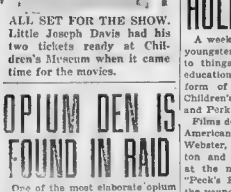
Patriotic Movies Enjoyed by Hundreds of Children at Museum

MOVING PICTURES depicting the life of George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and many other noted Americans, are being enjoyed at the Children's Museum of Boston. Yesterday the story of John G. Whittier was thrown on the screen, much to the edification of the children. Patrolman Arthur W. Sives of Station 13 is "ticket taker," as Joseph Kelley, Helen Coady, Irene McLaughlin, Irene Sullivan and Margaret Platt step on to the show. (Staff photos.)



ALL SET FOR THE SHOW. Little Joseph Davis had his two tickets ready at Children's Museum when it came time for the movies.

MUSEUM FILMS HOLD CHILDREN

A week off from school and 1500 youngsters turned their thoughts to things educational again. But education this time came in the form of moving pictures at the Children's Museum, Jamaicaway and Perkins st.

Films depicting the life of famous Americans, Washington, Jefferson, Webster, Lincoln, Whittier, Hamilton and Edison are being shown at the museum this week, while "Peck's Bad Boy" is being shown the youngsters in serial form. This accounts for the crush at the museum each day.

Earlier in the week the throng of youthful visitors was so large that the museum staff of 20 was unable to care for them and now a special officer aids in the task of seating the children.

While awaiting the start of the pictures the children, with museum attaches acting as guides, have ample opportunity to inspect the specimens of animal life on exhibition.

Nearly 10,000 children have visited the museum since last Saturday. Authorities there, including Mrs. Robert W. Sayles, treasurer, say that the small building that houses the Children's Museum is inadequate to accommodate the large number of visitors. As soon as Mayor Curley returns from the South the museum will make a plea for enlarged quarters.

LAD ASKS AID IN LOCATING DOG

"Four-five" is a dog. But dog gone. And five-year-old Francis Frence, of Bay View ave., Quincy, is lonesome. Here's his story as written by him:

"His name is 'Four-five.' Pa says he is a Red Irish Water Spaniel. Our cat came to the house on Ma's birthday and we called him Forty." (Ed's note—Explaining name of dog). We bought our doggie on Ma's birthday when she was—, but she would be mad if I told you. Four-five is two years old next October, and left home last Friday at 10 o'clock in the morning. The cops know about it and "Red" says he'll keep his eye out. I hope he won't forget to take it in, his eye, I mean.

"Our minister and everyone knows about it. He was a nice dog and if anyone has taken him please bring him back. I live on Bay View ave., Quincy.

"Please help me find my "Four-five" and have him come home."

BOSTON BUREAU SET TO HANDLE APPLICATIONS

Needy Veterans to Be Cared for First if the Senate Overrides Veto

Veterans, here's the way to apply for bonus loans, if the veterans' loan bill becomes law.

Make applications by mail if possible to Boston Veterans' Bureau, 670 Washington st.

Use the regular veterans' loan application blank form No. 1185.

Unless in absolute need, hold up applications for two weeks or a month in order that destitute veterans may be cared for first.

VETERANS' BUREAU READY

If applying at Veterans' Bureau in person, form in line at first floor counter designated for that purpose.

These instructions were issued today by Lieut. Col. William J. Blake, regional director, to expedite payment of loans.

The machinery of the Veterans' Bureau is set up and ready to function in 48 hours from the time the law goes into effect, he said.

The Bureau expects to handle in the order received, from 300 to 500 application a day.

Payments will be made by the bureau, and no delay is anticipated.

According to Col. Blake applicants should receive their checks within 48 hours.

He is desirous that applications be made by mail as far as possible as they can be handled more rapidly in this way.

Machinery has already been set up to open the mail, stamp the applications put them together and route them to the payment office.

UNEMPLOYED VETS FIRST

For those who apply in person there is a counter manned by ten employes who will assist veterans in making out applications, receive them and route them through the proper channels.

In order that unemployed veterans and those in dire need may be given prompt service, Col. Blake asks that others who have no immediate requirements, withhold their applications for a few weeks.

He estimates that his office may distribute eventually as much as $40,000,000 in loans, but the employes cannot handle more than $17,000,000 the first month.

DO NOT TELEPHONE

Above all, Col. Blake is eager to convince veterans that they should not write or telephone to inquire the progress of their loans, as such inquiries slow up the process.

All loans will go through a prescribed channel, and if no interference slows up the routine, will be paid within two days.

All applications will be handled in the order received, the bureau policy being: "First come, first served."

Searles Estate Gets Tax Refund

The estate of Edward F. Searles, millionaire Methuen recluse who died in 1920, has been given an income tax refund of $22,522, the Internal Revenue Bureau announced today.

Searles, an eccentric character left his $20,000,000 estate to his secretary, Arthur T. Walker of New York. His nephew, Victor A. Searles, Boston artist, contested the will and received $4,000,000.

The Internal Revenue Bureau also announced a refund of $310,778 to Warren Brothers Co. of Cambridge, and $32,900 to Marlette S. Brown of Boston.

FUR TRAPS MAN—THAT'S O. K.

IN THE FAR NORTH men trap furs, but right on Melrose streets fur traps man. The man, John Rowse, of Malden, annoyed Miss Cora Swinimer, of Melrose. Thirty days was the result—added to a torn coat caused when Miss Swinimer wrenched herself free from the intruder. (Staff photo.)

Auto Victim Cleared as Hit-Run Driver

Because testimony in Newton district court yesterday revealed he had been dazed by an injury to the head received when his car collided with another machine, Arthur Gray, of 10 Prospect st., West Newton, was found not guilty of leaving the scene of an accident without making himself known.

HUBBARD SUED FOR DIVORCE

Mrs. Charles J. Hubbard, the former Anna Fuller of Cambridge, one of Massachusetts' best women tennis players, is seeking a divorce from the captain of the Harvard 1923 football team, in Reno, according to word received here.

Mrs. Hubbard charges that her husband, who was twice picked by the late Walter Camp as guard on his first All-America eleven, was incompatible and alienated all friends through his jealousy and sullen attitude, which finally caused her ill health and the necessity of a trip to Europe.

Mrs. Hubbard seeks the custody of a three-year-old son. The settlement was reached by an agreement out of court providing that each should have the child for six months at a time. Hubbard agrees to pay $25 a week for the boy's maintenance.

North End Girl Hurt When Wall Tumbles

One girl was injured and several of her playmates narrowly escaped injury when the wall of the building at 10 Sheafe st., North End, partially collapsed near the roof, showering the street with bricks.

MARION GETS NEW ROLE

Los Angeles, Feb 27 Imagine Irving Thalberg's surprise to look all over New York and Hollywood for an actress to play in "Five and Ten" and locate her right on the home lot. Who do you think she is? Marion Davies, after a search that has gone on for two months to find a star to do justice to Fanny Hurst's popular novel. Metro-Goldwyn Mayer suddenly awoke to the fact that there was no one who could play the part as well as Marion Davies.

Perhaps the reason they never thought of Marion in the beginning is because "Five and Ten" is much heavier than anything she has been playing, and Marion certainly does know how to do comedy. They previewed "It's a Wise Child" at a Santa Monica theater the other night and it went over better than any picture Marion has ever made.

Louella O. Parsons

You should have heard the enthusiasm on M. G. M. lot next day. Robert Leonard, who directed "It's a Wise Child" and "The Bachelor Father," will direct "Five and Ten" and it ought to be a wow of a picture. Marion, who is playing a real heroine picture, will come back in a week or so to begin work.

HOSE WHO have had an advance look at F. W. Murnau's picture "Tabu," at Paramount, say it is different. They say and the art unique of the pictures inside the South Sea Islands. Personnot have liked Murnau's venture tale, for they have pursued it and will shortly start campaign releasing it throughout the country. I was curious to see what "Tabu" held of Polynesian word and means nothing for John in this picture soon, and the hula-hula young lives try to avoid the orchestra stage.

Mr. Burnau and Robert Ahanty, author of the story, led away to Bora Bora several also from Bora to Tahiti on film and one of the atom Reefs to Tahiti, being weeks months photographing this incredible country. Although full told most interesting results. There are no titles in the picture save at the beginning and end, and Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld has finished the synchronization. Like Charlie Chaplin's picture is no dialogue merely musical music and songs.

'TRADER HORN' PREMIERE

Details were perfected today for the premiere presentation, on next Sunday night at the Majestic, of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer motion picture, "Trader Horn." Notables are expected to be in the audience to greet this first showing hereabouts of a production heralded as of an epic nature.

A royal "casting office" was employed by W. S. VanDyke, film director, when he filmed the opening scenes of "Trader Horn" in British East Africa. The film drama is based on the famous book of adventure of the same title and opens with a great procession of natives bearing ivory to a barge.

Since he was thousands of miles away from Hollywood's casting office, Van Dyke naturally had to choose his extras by other means. So, when he arrived at Panyamur, Uevoda Province, he sought audience with the native sultan.

For a wagon load of trade goods he rented more than two thousand natives, in fact the whole village.

'FATHER'S SON' AND TED LEWIS FEATURE PROGRAM AT MET

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

BOYS WILL be boys, so "Father's Son," at the Metropolitan proves amusing and wholesome film fare. Showmen will be showmen so Ted Lewis and his entertainers have triumphant success at the same theater, Mr. Lewis being a wizard at winning and holding the audience.

Lacking strong story and dramatic meat, the photoplay nevertheless is a human and sympathetic rendering of Booth Tarkington's Gold Hera and Young Sir. It is finely acted and directed, has abounding humor, and turns up pat spots wherein there is a lot of thrill, which is not surprising when one beholds Lewis Stone and Irene Rich perfectly portraying the parental roles.

But, this being a juvenile theme film, the honors go to Leon James. This is a most excitable performance as the "misunderstood boy. But one must not forget another lad, Kenny Bennett, who, without seem to do does but very well indeed. The color of episode is a highlight of comedy. In general, there is much beauty and charm in the picture.

TED LEWIS is here high hat and a singing bag o' stage tricks, and he was so pleased his admirers is a caution. He has a lively bunch of performers with him. Benny Meroff jazzes up the classics with the big orchestra and wins new laurels.

Film Who's Who

Bebe Daniels, who plays in the feminine lead opposite Douglas Fairbanks in the star's latest talking picture, "Reaching for the Moon," at Loew's State, was born at Dallas, Tex., where her parents, Melville and Phyllis Daniels, were playing a two-year engagement on the stage in that city. Bebe made her first appearance on the stage when she was ten months old, being carried on the stage during a performance of the comedy, Jane.

BUCK TELLS OF TAPIR FIGHT IN 'BRING 'EM BACK ALIVE'

FANNING

With GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Leo Larivee With Mulligan at Helm May Scale Heights

Goofy Khan on Mat. Baseball New, but Bats Hard as Ever.

Cousin of Gungha Din Grunts Tonight

Another and greater Jack Delaney has flashed on the fistic screen. Young Leo Larivee of Waterbury is not as finished and experienced a fighter as was his countryman, Mseu Ovilla Chapdelaine, at the peak of his form. But the young French-Canadien you saw knock out Vittorio Livan at the Arena, last night, is a greater young fighting animal than was Delaney at a corresponding stage of his career.

LEO LARIVEE

With two such experienced and efficient handlers as George Mulligan of Waterbury and Dennis McMahon of Meriden handling him young Larivee is almost certain to make the fistic grade. It was McMahon, who, helped by Mulligan's financial backing, seized Louis Kid Kaplan on the world's featherweight championship throne.

GEORGE MULLIGAN is one of the finest squarest sporting men there is in this country. There isn't a more respected or better loved person in his section of Connecticut. As a sporting man he is known from Coast to Coast. The fight game never has been attached to his name. Be it Boston New York, Chicago, Denver, San Francisco, wherever you mention his name in connection with it, you always will find some one who will say, "George Mulligan—there is a square shooter."

Square shooting George Mulligan and Dennis McMahon have a great young fighter in Leo Larivee. The 19-year-old French-Canadian lad can box can hit, has two good fighting hands, a stout fighting heart and for so young and inexperienced a ring man, a good fighting head. Watch him climb!

[illegible] Stanley Loucks had knocked out Livan a representative of the New York Madison Square Garden visited Larivee in his dressing room and offered Mulligan a remunerative match for Larivee in New York.

"I thank you very much for the offer," courteously acknowledged Big George, "but I am sorry that at this time I cannot accept. Eddie Black [illegible] Larivee a chance to make good in Boston when Larivee needed it the most. I feel I am obligated to Mack. As long as I [illegible] Leo to box for him again here, you will have to wait."

[illegible] many times [illegible] would have returned down a flattering [illegible] offer? Now you know why Mulligan is [illegible] What boxing needs is a few more George Mulligans.

Livan's defeat by Larivee Vittorio Livan's stock continues to soar. Livan was great in defeat. Only a great fighter could lose the way Livan did. Dropped several times, saved by the bell, Vittorio rallied and for a gallant uphill fight under the handicap of a badly [illegible] you can search the country over and not find two more like's ring prospects than Livan and Larivee.

[illegible] and double grunt will be the slogan [illegible] Garden when Gino Garibaldi and [illegible] Soto [illegible] Too early [illegible] of the patrons. Gar [illegible] from Italy. Milo [illegible] is from [illegible] Tom Martin is [illegible] Mohawk Indian, and Tiny Boy [illegible] a Cuban brave. Karl Pojello is a [illegible] for Khan who is reported to be a descendant of Gungha Din, is from Afghanistan. [illegible] County Mayo isn't represented."

Goofy Khan was observed walking up Washington st. this morning bemoaning the fact that when it comes to checkers he'll have to do his work on water. But he swore by the sacred Georges that when tonight's shindy is over he will make Pojello say:

"You have lifted me and played me, by the [illegible] that made me,
You [illegible] mat than I am, Goofy Khan."

GHAFOOR KHAN.

THE ALLIANCE National League club batting average last year was 3.53. In 1930 it was .259. Last year in the National League 13,260 hits were made. In 1907, 8668. Last year 7025 runs were scored in the National League, 6370 in the American. In 1908 the major league run totals were 6128 and 4272. In both of the major leagues last year 1565 home runs were made. In 1906, 227.

Last year an old ball of the vintage of 1915, still wrapped in tinfoil and in a sealed case was taken out and placed alongside of a 1930 ball. A player stood in a chair holding one ball in one hand and one in the other at the same elevation. The two balls were dropped on the cement floor.

In the same eight-foot drop the 1930 ball bounced six inches higher than the official league apple of 1915.

NOW you see the reason for the changes in the batting averages and understood why the major leagues have adopted a new 1931 ball in an endeavor to give the pitchers a bit better break.

Some of the pitchers called last year's apple the "Go-fer ball." Every time a batter would land on the nose "it would go-fer four bases."

GENE RYE.

The pitchers were trying to get little Gene Rye's goat down at Pensacola.

"What I will be able to do with this ball!" exclaimed one.

"Feel them stitches," put in another. Say, I'll be able to make this ball curve around the grandstand!"

"The cover is thicker," announced a third. "Feel this ball," suddenly put in little Rye, offering his war club for inspection.

"Yeah? What about it, Half Pint?" queried the big pitchers in unison.

"It's just as hard as ever," boasted Half Pint. "Till they soften up the bats we fellows will keep on knocking you guys out of the box the same as ever."

LONE discordant note sounded in the national indoor championships was heard in the 600-yard run when first, second and third places went to foreigners. Phil Edwards is a Canadian via British Guinea. Sera Martin is French. Alex Wilson although a Notre Dame collegian, is a Canadian subject.

The two-mile steeplechase was won by Hans Assert of the Deutscher Sports Klub of New York. What has become of the Irish, English, Finnish and American distancers?

Some of the Dartmouth boys say Hal Mackey is the greatest natural athlete the Green has had since Myles Lane and Hank Bjorkman. A broken ankle prevented Hal from getting in football last fall, but until late in the season. This winter he has been playing some wonderful basketball. In his prep school days Mackey pitched six one-hit games one year and five the next.

WHAT WAS the reason given for Larry Johnson's withdrawal from the Lou Scozza match? Oh you can't fool the injured eye. It's true. Larry had eye trouble. He could not see the Arena offer but he could see a proposition to box Pierre Charles in Chicago one week from tomorrow night and wrote his name to the Chicago contract in a perfectly legible hand.

"There is talk that the Schmeling tour will be abbreviated to give the German a chance to rest up before taking up the training ordeal for his international duel with Young Stribling in June." Ha! Ha! Ha! Didn't we tell you the Schmeling circus would fa' down and go boomp!

Clyde Day, the champion hog caller from Fox Ridge, Ark., who is trying out with the Dodgers, has disappointed the boys. Not only has he refused to give one of his famous squeals but he hasn't even grunted. Maybe Clyde is afraid that if he grunted he would be mistaken for a wrestler.

Tapir on Rampage -:-

By Frank Buck and Edward Anthony

Chapter 1

Pictures by Hal Coffman

STAGES LIFE BATTLE WITH HUGE TAPIR

For 18 years Frank Buck, who today starts his thrilling tale of the fur and jungle lands, "Bring 'Em Back Alive," has been gathering wild animals for zoological gardens and circuses. He has brought back thousands of specimens which are now quartered from the Bronx Park Zoo in New York to Rio Duran, Cuba. Many were taken by Rimski-Brothers, Barnum and Bailey and other circuses.

He has had his share of thrills and excitement, of eyelash escapes from sudden and terrible death. Yet close association with gravest danger has not bred a contempt for peril nor a love of courting death. In his perilous career he takes no unnecessary risks. He does not have to look for trouble. Despite care, something is bound to go wrong when handling wild, death dealing animals in wholesale lots.

He has brought back 39 wild elephants, 60 tigers of the Royal Bengal, Malayan and Manchurian breeds, 28 spotted leopards, 20 black leopards, the meanest species extant of Asia's deadly felines, 15 crocodiles, cobra pythons, hyenas and water buffalo—on through the category.

He is all right so far. On the next venture—who knows?

CHAPTER I.

Almost any animal is dangerous when aroused. In 1926 I came close to being killed by a tapir, the meekest of animals.

I was in Sumatra assembling a group of specimens that included some pythons, Sumatra hornbills, langur monkeys, civet cats, porcupines, a stamping gibbon and a tapir.

Normally it would have been safe to let that tiny python would make more trouble for me than the rest of this collection put together. But this was not a normal situation. It was the tapir that won the Trouble Sweepstakes, breezing in with several lengths to spare.

The experience proved to me all over again how foolish it is to generalize about animals. I've seen two tigers, for instance, animals of the same sex and age, and caught at the same time display utterly different characteristics, grow on a home that after a few weeks I was putting my hand inside its cage and stroking the head of one while the other became more and more vicious until the process of loading it involved real courage and required absolute caution.

It isn't much less intelligent to generalize about human beings. It is to generalize about [illegible] about as sensible to [illegible] phants are kind or [illegible] ats mean or [illegible] trolled [illegible] all human beings are [illegible] the opposite of that [illegible] One finds almost as many [illegible] in animal character as [illegible] in human character.

ANIMAL CHARACTERISTICS.

Of course, there are certain basic things that are true of animals just as there are certain

JONES IS GIVEN FINAL PRIZE AS AMATEUR

Chicago, Feb. 27 (US)—Robert Tyre Jones, Jr., of Atlanta, emperor of golf, received his final, and probably most cherished award, as an amateur at Medinah Athletic Club.

It was the James E. Sullivan Memorial medal, conferred upon the famous golfer; primarily for his record-breaking achievements last year, but in reality for his fine example and influence as an amateur in advancing the cause of sportsmanship in 1930.

Avery Brundage, president of the A. A. U., made the presentation.

President Hoover wired Bobby his cordial congratulations on the honor of receiving the trophy for his splendid victories and all 'round sportsmanship.

Harvard Crews to Use Spruce Oars

When Charlie L. Whitside, coach of the Harvard varsity crews, selects his first three boats, the athletes will row with solid spruce oars, the first time in a decade.

Since the hollow or tubular oars have been used, due to the scarcity of good spruce, which was used for airplanes.

Harvard will be the first in this district to resume the solid oars, which are grooved on the outside instead of on the inside.

Higher Fee Sought by M.G.A.

Raising of membership fees in the Massachusetts Golf Association is recommended in letters mailed this morning to member clubs by Talbot C. Chase, president of the M. G. A.

The final decision will be made at a meeting to be held at the Harvard Club, March 27.

Behind this advocacy of higher fees is the purpose to amalgamate the golf service bureau of New England with the M. G. A. and thereby offer the service to all the members, rather than to those who prefer to deal through this bureau rather than independently.

The proposed raising of fees is as follows:

Clubs of 9 to 12 holes, from $25 to $50.

Clubs of 13 or more holes, from $50 to $75.

At the present time there are 53 clubs at 18 holes, 60 clubs at nine holes, one 12-hole course, and three at 27. As things stand now, there has been no increase in fee since the founding of the M. G. A. in 1903, while the costs of maintenance has increased far out of proportion.

Tufts Five Plays Final Game Tonight

The Tufts basketball team will terminate the 1931 season tonight with New Hampshire at Goddard Gymnasium.

Cochran will jump at center, with Ingraham and Robison forwards, and Fine and Hyman guards.

The freshman teams will meet in the preliminary game.

Revere-Winthrop Feud Is Settled

According to Coach Robert O'Keefe of Revere high, the storm clouds have passed away since the Thanksgiving Day football battle of Ft. Banks in 1928, and Revere and Winthrop high will meet on the gridiron in 1932.

WALKER WANTS BOUT WITH SHARKEY

Miami, Fla., Feb. 27—Mickey Walker, after twice whipping Johnny Risko, now wants to fight Jack Sharkey somewhere this summer, preferably in New York or Jersey City.

"We'll fight anybody at any weight, so long as we can see the color of the dough," asserted Kearns. "but we prefer Sharkey. I have had offers for the match from several places, including Cleveland, Chicago and Detroit. "Walker hasn't fought in New York in four years, however, and that looks like the spot to me, if we can close the deal."

Five Bouts at Brockton Tonight

There will be five bouts at Brockton tonight. Harry Allen, Brockton light heavyweight, meets Ug Gibson of Medford.

Billy Nevins of Cambridge clashes with Russell Kelcourse; Georgie Ostrow of Revere meets Midget Dundee of Brockton; Deacon Lew Wheeler of New Haven faces Gus Cedarholm of North Abington, and Joey Connolly of Dorchester takes on Patsy Santo of Revere.

McCullough New B. U. Nine Captain

Jack McCullough, Boston University's veteran outfielder has been elected captain of the Terrier nine for the coming season. He has starred in the Terrier nines for the past three years.

Wykoff and 'Sonny' Meet Next Thursday

Lee Wykoff, former University of St. Louis football star, has been named as Gus Sonnenberg's opponent for a show to be staged by Paul Bower at the Arena on next Thursday night.

Cathedral High Pilot Resigns

Dave Dillon, coach of the Cathedral high school football and basketball teams, has resigned as teacher-coach of the South End school, it was learned today.

The resignation of Dillon, who gave Cathedral high school a title winning team in the Catholic high school league last fall, and whose court team is among the leaders of the Catholic league fives, comes as a surprise.

No reason has been given for the move.

Dillon played on several Boston College football teams as a tackle.

Husky Trackmen Seek Eastern Title

Northeastern track team left today for Amherst where tomorrow afternoon the Huskies will seek to win the first Eastern Intercollegiate indoor championship meet in the Amherst College gymnasium.

Colgate, Syracuse, Include Union, Middlebury, Vermont, Amherst, Springfield, Norwich, R. I. State, Connecticut Aggies, W. P. I., Mass. Aggies and Trinity.

Al Mello Returns to Ring on Monday

Al Mello, New England welterweight champion, will return to the ring when he will clash with Joe Marino of New York in a ten-round bout at Fall River on Monday night. Mello is training at Kelley & Hayes' gym and says he is in good condition for his comeback.

Americans Lose to Ottawa, 4-2

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 27—The Ottawa Senators beat the New York Americans, 4 to 2, in a fast National Hockey League game here.

Cox was the big star for the Senators, scoring one goal and assisting in two others.

LIVAN IS K. O.'D IN 8TH ROUND BY LARIVEE

By JACK CONWAY

Leo Larivee, Waterbury, Ct., middleweight, furnished one of the biggest boxing upsets of the indoor season when he knocked out the colorful Victorio Livan of Italy in the eighth round of their bout at an Argonne A. A. show at the New Boston Arena.

The speculative element was betting 10 to 1 on Livan to win when the bout started. The odds were justified in view of the fact Livan has had a sensational run of victories while coming to the fore.

It was only a few weeks ago Livan knocked out Nick Testo of Troy in the New York Garden in the tournament to name a new middleweight champion. Larivee won a close decision over Odonne Piazza, a stablemate of Livan's, in the Boston bow a few weeks ago. Two more boys had merely paved Larivee as a tough, willing youngster.

They changed their opinions shortly after the gong sounded for the opening of the first round of the Waterbury middleweight's tussle with Livan. Larivee came roaring out of his corner and showed from the very start that he didn't intend to give ground.

Larivee Has Livan Bouncing Off Canvas

Larivee, an excellent boxer and heavy socker, accepted Larivee's challenge. During a mixup Larivee planted a short left hook to the jaw and then drove a terrific right hand to the body. Livan went to the canvas, but got up without taking any of the benefit of the count.

The short left hook had done real damage and Livan was groggy when he resumed boxing. He had also injured his right knee when he went down.

Larivee was as cool as the proverbial ice, measured his opponent

Dr. Ralph Wilson vs. Billy Bartush

Reg. Charles Urban vs. Jack Washburn

Gino Garibaldi, Italian heavyweight wrestler, is a favorite to win over Dick Daviscourt of Chicago in their one-fall to a finish match at the Boston Garden tonight under the direction of Ray Fabian.

Garibaldi has shown of late wrestling tournaments at the Garden. His amazing strength and ruggedness enabled him to win both matches.

The Italian grappler will receive his most serious opposition when he collides with Daviscourt. The latter is one of the most experienced big fellows showing on the mat today. He is a master of all holds, is fast on his feet and has good general

Fabian announces that the winner of tonight's bout will be signed to collide with Jim Londos, Greek heavyweight champion, in the Garden next month.

TUT, PETROLLE MEET 5TH TIME

New York, Feb. 27 (AP)—Kinky Tut and Billy Petrolle, two hard-punching lightweights, renew their ancient rivalry in Madison Sq. Garden tonight.

Five times these warriors have clashed before with Tut holding a slight edge over the "Fargo Express." Petrolle won the first two of the contests, then Tut captured two decisions and evened the score. Petrolle went into the fifth battle with plenty of support.

Hand followed a brilliant comeback campaign by giving Jimmy McLarnin the worst beating of his career. Tut also got a bit intimidated by Petrolle's sensational series of knockdowns and was the first dragger in both a minute of the first round.

MARANVILLE ARRIVES AT CAMP

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP)—"Rabbit" Maranville arrived in camp yesterday accompanied by Mrs. Maranville.

He has just recovered from a bad case of influenza which reduced him eight pounds and left him rather weak. He says he is all right now and will get out to work with the bunch today.

Johnny Neun stopped a hard bounding grounder with his forehead but was not badly hurt.

Harry Seibold, the pitching fisherman, asked Manager Bill McKechnie if he could have one day off a week when the team pays in the Hub so he can go on a fishing trip. Bill's reply was "Yes, if I can go with you."

Nate Kroek, a Boston pruner, was cut with the Braves early today in the practice pastime for the exercise. Nate was mistaken for a Rabbit Maranville the other day.

Lou Fonseca, former Cleveland and Newman ivory star, is back in camp now and then to see the Tribe in action. Lou figures the Hub club to be up near the top this year.

Regis Letleny, husky hurler from Pittsburgh, is the roommate of Al Bool, and their chattering early in the morning annoys the scribes.

Hank Gowdy, the good-natured Braves coach, spends his spare moments reading spooky books like Dracula.

Terrier Battery Candidates Report

Boston University's battery candidates report for their initial workout at the B. U. gym today.

The outstanding slab artists are "Buckey" Weafer "Lefty" Lojko and Freddie Church. They are now made up the varsity twirling staff last year.

The only veteran catcher available is Mike Jukins.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Golf's Greatest Teacher

Let's go! It's time to take to writing and plenty of them get that way, and immediately he begins to talk about golfing.

Unfortunately, in golf there is no end to rhythm. All else is mere detail. You can give all your golfing study to rhythm, and get somewhere perhaps Gene Tunney studied Jack Dempsey's rhythm with regard to the chin uplifting industry, and made a million. You are not out for a million, of course, but the intense analysis which Tunney applied to Dempsey's work has a golfing application. Tunney noted in films, that Dempsey required to get himself "set" before letting loose his left hook. A "left hook" in boxing terms arrives with a roll and smack just above the heart. A successful use of these mule-kick knockouts exerts a wearing-down effect. Tunney fitted his own rhythm into the fraction of a second Dempsey took to draw back his massive arm and made it follow accordingly. The title and a million dollars changed hands on that slight margin—which shows what you can do with rhythm. In any athletic endeavor, rhythm is the dominating fundamental.

Bring 'Em Back Alive

By Frank Buck With Edward Anthony

fundamental that applies to most people, but this is not due to the fact that the minute a man starts generalizing about animals he displays his inexperience. Perhaps the nearest one can come to a generalization is to say that most animals are dangerous when they think they're in danger. And, after all, that is less a generalization about animals than it is a definition of life, involving human beings and the animal kingdom both.

The tiger that strikes at the man who is feeding him through the bars has decided that this man is an enemy with designs on his life; the gentler tiger has assigned him his make-up that assigns him to his captivity and tells him he has nothing to fear from the two-legged creature who is looking after him. Eventually the rougher specimen, when he discovers that his keeper is no enemy, he will one day have to fight for his life, tones down and becomes manageable.

Of all the animals in the Malayan jungle the tapir is probably the least dangerous. He is made less formidable, for instance, than the wild boar, which has tusks and is capable of ripping open an unwary enemy in a fight.

NO TUSKS OR CLAWS

The tapir, in addition to having no tusks, is also clawless. Each foot has four hoof-like toes, each back foot three; and these are hardy weapons. He has big, powerful teeth, but these he is known to be a vegetarian. These are feared by neither man nor beast. One is almost as conscious of these as one is of the teeth, however capable, of the average horse, cow or deer.

The tapir is a strange creature, in a class by itself. It is the only animal on earth today that has come down the ages in its present form. Evolution has left it untouched. It was as it is today thousands and thousands of years ago when the animal was no bigger than a greyhound and the horse was a four-toed animal the size of a fox terrier. It has always been to my mind such a living symbol of size and evolution, as a perfect an embodiment of the quiet mellowness of the years that I could have wished the imagined myself being suddenly attacked by the Sphinx as by a tapir.

I couldn't have given less thought to the troublesome possibilities of my specimen if he had been a jack rabbit. The only thing that made me at all conscious of him was the fact that he had a badly barked back.

He was a full-grown Malayan tapir, weighing about 600 pounds. I had received him to fill an order from an animal dealer in Kansas City, who supplies the zoos, and such transactions are usually made through a dealer.

INJURED IN TRAP

For the full length of the back, along the spine, the skin of the animal was badly barked. He had walked into a trap that was a bird-feeder enclosure with a gate that snapped to. The inside of the trap and the approach to it had been baited with corn meal, a favorite delicacy of the Malay tapir.

In his frantic effort to escape he had plunged about blindly and succeeded in scraping whole patches of skin off his spine.

In terms of my business, this meant I had to do a job of feeding on his back, for, after all, I had to get him to an animal with a whole skin. I wanted to apply some ointment when I first noticed the injury, but my position in Sumatra, but the conditions were not favorable there nor on the little Dutch boat on which I brought my collection back to Singapore.

On the outskirts of Singapore is the small town of Katong, where I maintained a bungalow. There I instructed Dahlam Ali, the Malay who served me on the expeditions and who knew the Malayan district (just as Lal Bahadur assisted me on collecting trips where a knowledge of Hindustani and Hindus was essential to build a small pen for the tapir. He and another boy in my employ built one about 20 feet square. They drove posts into the ground and with two-by-four planks built an enclosure about five feet high, a height which the animal could not jump. When two sides were up I drove the animal in from his cramped quarters and with Ali hastily nailed up the opening while the other boy kept our captive cornered with a pole. Never had I seen a more harmless looking tapir. It seemed as I regarded him that it had been wholly unnecessary to keep him cornered while we nailed him in. He was completely absorbed in the business of comforting himself so that he could scratch his irritated back, which was itching, against the planks of the enclosure.

NO GATE IN PEN

No gate was made in the pen, as this seemed unnecessary labor. The spaces between the planks through which the animal was fed provided a good foothold and it was a simple matter to climb over. I did so, as casually as if I were entering a cow pasture. In my hand I carried a pound can of zinc ointment.

Ali was with the other boy feeding a great collection of birds which I had stored in a shelter 200 feet away, a collection that included a big cage of lill mynas. These are coal black chattering birds with yellow wattles, some members of the species possessing the doubtful gift of gab even to a greater extent than parrots.

I scooped up a handful of the ointment, and, walking over to where this member of the animal kingdom's Oldest Family was scratching himself against a plank, slapped it over his back with as much detachment as if I were a bricklayer slapping some mortar on a brick. Bricks aren't very dangerous (unless heaved at one) and neither are tapirs . . . unless . . .

As I slapped that fistful of ointment over the tapir's spine he started running. I followed as best I could, with my hand over his back like a bareback rider preparing to mount his charger. Suddenly the animal whirled around, dropped back a few feet and charged straight at me, burying his head in my stomach and knocking the wind out of me as his six hundred pounds sent me sprawling on my back. I had hardly hit the ground when the Meekest of Animals jumped on me, his front feet bearing down on my chest in a bird feet on the ground

DEALT FOUL BLOW

I started swinging over one side in an effort to get up. This required the lurid Greatest Example of Humility to hoist his hind legs over my head and, in the process dealing me a painful and rankling blow in a delicate region. It was a palpable foul, but as there was no referee present the pacifist proceeded to stomp up and down all over me, bruising me in a dozen places.

I didn't exactly enjoy what was happening to me, but neither did I become alarmed until the animal's 600 pounds began to feel like a ton. It began to take a tapir seriously until something happens that forces you to do so. In all my previous dealings with the species it had lived up to its reputation for harmlessness, so it took me a few minutes to get it through my head that this tapir was more than mystified; that the infuriated creature had murder in his heart.

It's hard to figure out what happened inside that animal's sluggish brain when I applied that first dose of ointment. The salve doubtless caused some irritation, but the hardly could have been enough to convince the beast that he was in the presence of an enemy.

The tapir had me painfully pinned down. I could feel his breath on my face. His eyes had a look that made my fleas creep. I had never seen such hate in a tapir's expression.

My first attempt to whirl around and free myself having failed, I poused myself for a great effort, into which I put every ounce of strength I had in swinging around I succeeded in partly freeing one shoulder, but this accomplished nothing, for the enraged beast pounded me flat again, moving up a few inches closer to my head in the process.

MOMENT OF HORROR

A.d then I had a moment of horror. Opening his big mouth, the animal bared his powerful teeth and reached to get hold of my face. It didn't take intelligence to see that that awful mouth was capable of taking in the width of my head. Once he got my face between those jaws it would be an easy matter to pull the flesh off.

As I looked straight down the throat of this panting brute, I realized my danger and the next thing I knew I was yelling—yelling for all I was worth. I'm not ashamed to admit it. I had no desire to have meat ripped off my face by this vegetarian on a

With all the lung power I could summon I fairly shrieked, "Ali! Ali!"—at the same time freeing one leg by a tremendous effort. As the animal strained forward, his teeth coming nearer and nearer, I got my right knee under his lower jaw, and reaching up, got hold of both of his ears with my hands. He started furiously swinging his head right and left in an effort to shake me off, but I held on for dear-life, my knee keeping his teeth and my face apart.

. . . And then the demented creature started dragging me all over the inclosure, jumping off me to dislodge me, but I would take me for a ride. Every time I made an effort to get up he'd pound me flat against the turf with his front feet.

CRIES FOR HELP

"Ali! Ali!" I yelled myself hoarse. Why didn't he come running over? Where the hell was he? . . . And then I answered my own question. I had sent Ali to care for my birds. He was in the bird shelter looking after them . . . With a sudden weakness, I found myself cursing my collection of bill minas. These boisterous birds fall other birds seem quiet by comparison) were probably chattering away at such a rate that it was impossible for Ali to hear my cries.

I felt the tapir going out of my fingers and in desperation strove to tighten my hold on the crazed creature's ears. And, with one of those unnatural bursts of strength that come in time of destruction is stirring one out of countenance, I stiffened my knees against the back of this. With renewed fury he started dragging me all around the lot, adding new lacerations to my sore and battered body.

"Ali! Ali!" I put everything I had into this final cry.

I was beginning to wonder how long I could hang on when back was aching as it had never ached in all my days, and my chest was sore from the pounding of those hoofs. I would have to scramble to my feet somehow and get over that fence. Having survived encounters with tigers and leopards, I had the intention of being wiped out by a damned tapir, an animal that had always seemed to me a sort of giant cockroach, with as much spirit and personality, under normal circumstances, as that loathsome bug.

GRABS AT TAPIR'S EARS

My weakening fingers clutched the tapir's ears in a final frenzy of self-preservation and my knee, doing its best to seem a firm and determined knee, managed to maintain its wobbly intercession between me and the teeth of the four-legged lunatic that was trying to destroy me at last at least came running up, excitedly shouting, "Apa ini, tuan? Apa ini?" (What is this, master?)

It wasn't necessary for me to answer. Ali saw what was going for the other boy to come over and help him, he grabbed a board—one of the pieces of lumber left over after the pen had been built—and started beating the animal over the head with it. The other boy, who was at the far end of the compound, finally heard his screams and came tearing around.

With even more presence of mind than Ali (a real surprise to me, for over a period of years Ali had displayed more resourcefulness in emergencies than any native I had ever employed anywhere in Asia), the newcomer grabbed a two-by-four scantling and shoved it into the open mouth of the would-be killer, the animal biting down on it. The surest way of saving my features was to put something besides my wornout knee between me and those vicious teeth, and the scantling did the trick.

THE RESCUE

The animal, one piece of lumber between his teeth and another being brought down on his head, backed away a few paces. As he did Ali reached through the fence and grabbed my arm, pulling me further away from the maddened creature. At this point the other boy jumped over the fence, and, while Ali beat the animal off with his board, lifted me to my feet. Almost fainting against it in my weakened condition, I scrambled to the top of the fence, putting one foot in an open space between the boards about a foot from the ground. Then this boy who served as Ali's assistant, (although in this stirring operation he was nearly the leader and Ali the assistant) gave me a great boost, which, combined with my own efforts, sent me tumbling over the fence onto the ground on the other side, where I landed in a limp heap. A mass of bruises, I lay there for half an hour before I could summon the strength to move.

When I stood up at last it was with the Ali and the other boy Malay, who hustled me off to bed. The battering I had received left my head and face from head to foot and it was three days before I could get up.

The day after I was laid up for repairs, Ali, who was looking after me, sat beside the open window of my room chewing betel nut and using for his cuspidor that portion of Katong which lay beneath my window. Ali was hardly ever without a good gob of this eastern equivalent for chewing tobacco and he spat frequently. It seemed to help his thinking.

ALI IS PUZZLED

Ali was puzzled about that tapir. To him, as to me, the tapir was a perfect exemplification of the peaceful attitude toward life, the passive role of the animal was running away from fights instead of getting into them.

I tried to tell Ali, in simple language, that the animal's conduct represented the aggressiveness born of perpetual fear. The creature had given me a beating that I was trying to destroy him: as he tried to destroy me. If there had been a chance to run I'm the tapir would have headed for that instead of me. It was as simple as all that.

Ali wrinkled up his nose. He was displeased.

He kept after me until, to end the discussion, I told him that he was probably right. The creature must be full of devils.

Ali beamed. He knew all along that I would see his point. Of course, the animal was full of devils.

FULL OF DEVILS

But he wasn't finished yet.

Did the tuan think it was wise to ship to America an animal so full of devils? Would it not make trouble for me?

This was carrying the joke too far. I finally convinced Ali that an animal so full of devils should be shipped out of Asia, which was already overstocked with devils with all possible haste.

For the good of my soul and that tapir's back, I was determined to resume my operations with the one specimen. This I did, but I confess that I mimicked to his astonished back from the outside of the pen. I wrapped some rags around the end of a long stick and fastened them securely in place. Then put some ointment on the rags and with the home-made apparatus managed to get in giving him a thorough smearing. A series of these treatments proved effective and before long the tapir's back was healed. A few months later I delivered him to the Kansas City dealer who had ordered him for a small Mid-West zoo. There he proved as easy to handle as a kitten.

and then dropped him for a count of nine with a right to the jaw.

Livan was sent down again for a nine count, a right to the chin doing the damage. When he got up another right to the jaw tipped him over for the fourth time. He took the count of nine.

Larivee swarmed all over Livan when he resumed hostilities and had him on the floor at the bell.

Livan staged a fine comeback in the second frame. Despite his injured leg, he was going along fairly well until the eighth round. Larivee then made a spurt, rocked his opponent with left and right hand belts and then knocked him out with a right to the jaw.

12,000 FANS SEE 3-3 TIE AT GARDEN

By BILL GRIMES

Needless penalties to Yip Foster, Jack Pratt, Smoky Harris, and Yank Boyd cost the Bruin Cubs a victory over the Springfield Indians last night at the Boston Garden. At the conclusion of the overtime period, the teams were in a three-all deadlock.

Two records were established last night at the Garden, one a new all time mark and the other a seasonal feat. The Cubs and the Indians played before the largest crowd — by at least 5000 — that ever witnessed a Canadian-American League contest. According to the official figure there were slightly more than 12,000 fans present.

The seasonal record was established by the Cubs in tieing the Indians for they tied all six of their previous encounters with Frank Carroll's charges.

Although the Cubs did not click in smoothly as they did against the Arrows and Reds, the game was, nevertheless, a thrilling contest. On two occasions the Cubs came from behind but did not forge ahead in front until the overtime period.

Penalties to Cubs Enable Indians to Tie

With the Cubs leading 3 to 2, about half way through the extra time period, Harris was sent to the penalty box for a while on a necessary delay of game infraction of the rules.

And, no sooner was Smoky comfortably seated with the penalty timer than Yank Boyd got an arm lock on Otis Hevmer and, when the Indians attempted to break the hold, a fight started. Boyd and Heydmer took a few wines at each other and then the players and officials interfered and the extra attraction was over. Boyd and Heydmer were given game penalties and with the Cubs two men shy the Indians staged a few second spurts and managed the game to a tie after consisting a total of [illegible] into a tally.

Although Yip Foster was in tim over some fast maneuvers on the part of the Indians he was the offensive star of the game, with two goals to his credit. But the laurels belong to Benny Grant who turned in one of the best exhibitions of goal tending ever witnessed in the Garden.

MARTIN DENIES HE WOULD AID JIM MALONEY

SAYS CHARGES MADE TO SEE ARE FALSE

made in a letter sent to Leon See, European manager of Carnera

"You can make it as strong as you like that if I am the third man in the ring when Maloney and Carnera battle next Thursday night, neither boxer will be favored in the least," said Martin. "The contest will be decided on its merits.

"Dan Carroll, for Maloney, and Billy Duffy, acting for Carnera, agreed on me as referee when the Miami match was made. I then received permission from the Massachusetts Boxing Commission to referee the contest

"I have been informed that Leon See, Carnera's European manager, now objects to my acting as referee. He says he has received a letter from a man in Boston connected with the boxing game in which the charge is made that Dan Carroll has a contract with me under the terms of which I am to receive $5000 if I can help Maloney win. This charge is ridiculous

"I never promised Carroll or anybody else that either Maloney or Carnera would be favored by me. I have always called decisions as I have seen them.

Martin Leaves for Miami Tomorrow

"I have been given the name of the man who wrote the letter attacking my character. It is my intention to take legal proceedings.

"Naturally I am anxious to referee at Miami. A victory there would lend to give me national standing. Perhaps the situation will iron itself out yet.

"Frank Bruen has asked me to leave for Miami tomorrow. I shall do so in the company of my father, George E. Martin.

"In the event I don't referee the Maloney-Carnera match, I will have charge of some other contest on the card."

Dispatches from Miami state that Ed Dickson of Kalamazoo, Michigan, and Slim McMillan of Detroit are now under consideration as referee. Dan Carroll is holding out for Martin

In the event of a compromise it is likely that the selections will fall to McClellan.

Miami Boxing Board in Special Meeting

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb 27 (INS)—A special meeting of the Miami Boxing Commission will be called here within the next few days to name a referee for the Carnera-Maloney fight March 5, it was announced here today.

The commission meeting was called as a result of the due approval of Leon See, manager of the ambling Alp, of Johnny Martin, Boston, who had been suggested as the third man by Dan Carroll, manager of Maloney.

Search for a referee for the Carnera-Maloney go has been in progress for three weeks. It received its first setback when the New York Boxing Commission refused to permit Lou Magnolia to wear the fight because of Carner's suspension in that state.

Meanwhile, Primo Carnera continued his training efforts to five miles of road work daily every morning. He has not donned a glove at least in public since he cracked a rib in a sparring match two weeks ago.

In a preliminary game the Boston University freshmen team will play Wentworth Institute.

CampGossip

Winter Haven, Fla., Feb 28 (AP)—The Phillies went through a two hour drill yesterday the first since their arrival at the Spring training camp.

The pitchers were divided in their opinion of the new ball with its raised stitches. Some were of the opinion it would make but little difference, while others said it provided a better grip and appeared less lively than the old ball.

Clearwater, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP)—Young Al Cohen, a promising looking rookie from Macon, doesn't think so much of his chances of breaking into the Brooklyn Robins' outfield at present.

"It's like trying to break into a bank with a peashiller," he commented. "I've been looking up the averages and I see Herman hit .381; O'Doul .348 and Frederick .334 and they tell me Frederick had a bad year. Why another Ty Cobb could hardly break in here."

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb 27 (AP)—Cy Perkins has touched the 35-year mark, but you'd never know it to watch the veteran catcher perform his daily chores for the New York Yankees. He has as much zest for the game now as he had when he broke in it back in 1914.

Avalon Cal., Feb 27 (AP)—Manager Rogers Hornsby is rushing the Chicago Cubs along at such a clip that he believes they will be ready for their first practice game Sunday.

The batterymen have had nearly two weeks of work and are about ready. The infielders and outfielders are in good condition.

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP)—Sammy Gray, whose pitching record with the Browns last year was a decided disappointment, believes he'll have much better luck this season. Gray, one of the first to report for training, already was in condition to pitch, having limbered up his arm in Texas.

Bradenton, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP)—Manager Gabby Street of the Cardinals expected to take over direction of the team's training here today after a day's absence because of a stomach disorder. If Gabby decides to take another day's rest, Coach Clyde Wares will continue as manager pro-tem.

DADDY OF THE YD

An Intimate Story of the Life of General Clarence R. Edwards

This is the tenth in a series of articles on the life of Gen. Clarence R. Edwards

By HARRY A. BENWELL

General Edwards' orders, calling for the concentration of the 26th Division at Bar sur Aube, provided for practical maneuvers, but the outfit never engaged in them.

The big German offensive of March 21 had started and about March 26 the general received orders to proceed to the Toul sector and relieve part of the First Division and a French division.

On April 3 the relief was accomplished and the division was holding an entire sector for the first time, eventually extending over 21 kilometers of front

Then came the first real battle for the Yankees, Apremont, which lasted four days, starting April 10, in which the men of the 26th covered themselves with glory, and the colors of the 104th Infantry were later decorated with the Croix de Guerre.

Followed Seichepray, April 20th Humbert Plantation on the right near Pilrey, May 31, and Xivray Marvoisin on June 16.

On the last of June the Yankees were relieved by the 5th French Division and the 82d American Division, and the 26th was concentrated in the vicinity of Toul, where headquarters was located for about five days.

The general then received orders to entrain the troops secretly and proceed to the vicinity of Maux (deine-et-Marne), where the division was under the 1st Army Corps command

Stopped Germans

Yankee Division Turned Right Flank of Foe at Vaux

On July 8 orders were received to relieve the 2d Division, holding the Pas-Fini Sector, between Bois Belleau and Vaux. This relief was accomplished, and headquarters located in Chevigny. July 16 marked the date of the last German offensive, the right flank of which was stopped by the 26th at Vaux

July 18 the division with the rest of the allied command started the big counter-offensive, taking the towns of Torcy, Belleau and Givry, and making a double change of direction to the East with the Chateau Thierry-Soissons road as an objective

Then a new objective, the Jaulgonne Sector, by Denise, was to be given, which the division reached in short order, having advanced over 18 kilometers in eight days

On the 25th Gen. Edwards turned over sector command to the 42d Division and concentrated most of his outfit in billets at La-Ferte-Soupplorte with division headquarters at Mery-sur-Marne. On August 10 he was ordered to the Department of Cote D'Or where 10 days' intensive training was undergone, the division absorbing 6000 replacements.

Then the division moved up to Bere-le-Duc, and took its place in the Les Eparge section with headquarters at Rupt-en-Woevre. Here the organization participated in the St. Mihiel offensive, and was the only American division in the 5th Corps command to get into action during the battle

The 26th fought the whole day of Sept. 12 against superior numbers, breaking through at night to Hattencharel and Virmeulles, which were captured. Attacking again the next morning the division with the units penetrating from the south, succeeded in closing the St. Mihiel salient for all time to the enemy

On Oct. 26, the day of the start of the Meuse-Argonne offensive west of Verdun, the 26th Division was ordered to make the Germans believe the Americans desired to break through and capture Metz Gen. Edwards chose Marcheville and Riaville as objectives of these demonstrations and held them for 16 hours, keeping five German divisions on his front.

Later he made several large raids taking St. Hilaire with many prisoners, and also Bezo-de-Warcqville

A few days later the division was relieved and Gen. Edwards was ordered to report to the command-ing general, 5th Colonial Corps, as corps reserves with headquarters in the famous citadel at Verdun. He had hardly established his position in the corps reserves when he was ordered into the line

On October 10 he relieved the 18th French Division in the Neptune sector, north of Bras where his headquarters was then established. There the division assumed the offensive and captured the Heights of the Meuse, being cited by the corps commander as a result

It was at this time Gen. Edwards received two of the worst blows of his career. The first was news of the death of his daughter Bessie, a victim of pneumonia contracted while nursing in a Southern army camp

A few days later, on October 24, 17 days before the Armistice, the general received the second crushing blow, being relieved from command and ordered back to the United States to train other divisions for duty in France. He sailed on November 8 and reached Washington November 25, being assigned to command Camp Lee Va.

The generals first act after taking over the new command was to obtain a ten days' leave and hurry to Boston.

Bike Racing Stars in 4 Match Races

New York, Feb. 27—Four match races are carded in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night, where a big program of professional and amateur races will be run as a warm-up for the six-day race which starts Sunday. Fred Spencer, three times American sprint champion, will meet Franco Georgetti, Italy, in a mile match, the best two in three heats

Bobby Walthour will make his first appearance in the Garden in over two years when he meets Alfred Letourneur, French rider, in a mile match.

Passing the Puck

After years of bucking against cross currents and eddies, the amateur hockey situation appears to have swung into a favorable channel and is all set to go places.

With the Boston Hockey Club and the University Club both affiliated with the Boston Garden, the amateur game will regain its old time popularity, for it will be under the guidance of sagacious hockey promoters.

In order to save their own faces, some promoters have placed the blame for the loss of interest in amateur hockey at the door of the professionals. Under the proper sponsorship, amateur hockey can and will come back, and moreover, would have held its place against the "pros" had it been conducted as an amateur sport.

With two such great professional clubs as Les Canadiens and the Maroons, the Montreal fans are naturally accustomed to the high est type of hockey. But, try and get a seat at the Forum when the Railroad or the Bell Telephone league are playing. Against McGill, Harvard played to a capacity house in the Forum.

And, still, they try to tell you that the "pros" have killed the amateur game. It was the promoters and not the "pros" that put the "simon pures" down for the long count, but like Gene Tunney, they'll come back and win out.

Bill Flynn put across a fast one when he incorporated the Boston Hockey Club. Flynn was "coldcocked" out of the management of the B. H. C. but he was game enough to keep his trouble to himself until the trip to Poland was assured.

Now that the University Club and Boston Hockey Club are affiliated with the Boston Garden, with the home of the Bruins and the Cubs, the North Station emporium will be the hockey center of New England.

Although there are still a few seats at the Harvard A. A., the Garden will be completely sold out when Harvard and Yale clash in their first game tomorrow night.

As both Harvard and Yale are at war strength, there is little choice as to the winner of the first engagement. Both clubs have fine records for the season, each having lost but one game, although the Elis were set back by Toronto Varsity.

Yale has two fine wingers in Don McLennan and Chick Fletcher and a couple of good play making centers in Capt. Frank Ayres, who starred at Andover before matriculating at Yale and Frank Nelsen.

Unfortunately for Yale, Capt Luce was forced to remain on the sidelines most of the season due to an injury incurred during a game with the Boston Hockey Club

After an absence of six weeks Dutch Gainor will return to the Bruins' lineup against the New York Rangers next Tuesday night at the Garden. He has been working out with the Bruins and Cubs, and although not up to the best of form, will be an asset to the Rosemen.

With Tiny Thompson coaching the defense and Marty Barry developing the attack, the Boston Hockey Club should round into a formidable team before the close of the season.

EASTER HERO IS NOSED OUT

Lingfield, Eng., Feb. 27 (AP)—J. H. (Jock) Whitney's Grand National candidate Easter Hero was defeated today in the two mile buckhurst handicap steeplechase by Major C K Davy's Desert Chief.

Easter Hero, an overflowing favorite in the betting, made all the running and cleared the last fence four lengths ahead Desert Chief coming like a whirlwind, just nipped the American horse at the wire

It was believed Easter Hero could have won if he rider had not been overconfident. The crowd was in a frenzy of excitement as the English jumper stuck his nose in front of Easter Hero.

Major J. B. Walker's Starbox was third in the four horse race, eight lengths back of Easter Hero, who was beaten only by a head. The purse was 150 sterling ($750).

WINSETT TO GET TRIAL AT JOB

By JOE CASHMAN

Pensacola, Fla., Feb. 27—Long Jack Winsett's mighty bat having ruined the reputation of every Red Sox pitcher in camp, now threatens the wreck of the well-laid plans of Manager John Collins.

When practice started "Shono" felt certain that Bill Sweeney, the only experienced first baseman on the squad, would be his regular initial sacker this season with Al Van Camp of Des Moines acting as understudy.

But Winsett's phenomenal hitting has completely upset that dope.

A close study of the youngster, who is as tall and stringy as the hills of his native Tennessee, has convinced Collins that he isn't a big league outfielder. It has also just about convinced him that the rookie is a great natural hitter for whom room must be found somewhere.

So Collins has decided to try to develop him into a first baseman

Winsett's Long Reach a Great Asset

The lad worked out at the bag in Thursday's practice and will replace Van Camp there for the Tarheels game in the game against the regulars today.

Considering his limited experience Long Jack does remarkably well around the sack

Nine innings will be played and only six pitchers will be used, each working three innings.

The rookies will do all the pitching, just as in the opening tilt.

Collins knowns that veteran pitchers can do, and the kids are going to see all the action until he has found the two or three best to keep along with Russell, MacFayden, Morris, Gaston, Lisenbee, Durham, Moore and Brillheart.

It begins to look as though Bob Kline, the youthful 230-pound giant from Columbus, would be one of the newcomers to stick. "Tiny" is still a little awkward in throwing rapidly, and there is always a chance that he will become a star over night

The danger that the Sox might break camp here Sunday has passed. President Ben Quinn threatened to pack up and go elsewhere if a morning practice game scheduled to be held at the ball park Sunday afternoon took place.

TODAY'S TRUE STORY

OUT OF THE SHADOW

Girl Defies Gossips

EVE GRAYSON was one of those who didn't seem to fit in. She knew it herself, and although she was passably good-looking and came from one of the best families in Tiverton, she wasn't exactly a favorite with the men.

Her employer was a bachelor [illegible] reputation was none too favorable, it was currently reported that — had a wife living, but no one had ever seen her and he himself was silent on the subject.

When Eve presented herself at his dingy office in response to an advertisement in a local paper he surveyed her with a glance that was little short of insolent. "And you say you can't take dictation and you're not very fast on the typewriter and you want $20 a week——"

Eve colored and nodded—"and I suppose your eyes will be on the clock and you'll be gallivanting all night so you'll be no good the next day."

Then Eve laughed—"I'm not much in demand," she said in her soft voice "so you needn't be afraid of that."

Carstairs looked at her "H'm," he said, "I'll try you and if you don't suit you'll be fired—without tears, I hope; I hate tears."

"No tears," Eve promised and proceeded to make herself invaluable to him. But it was not until Carstairs took to asking her to be his home that the gossips got busy.

Eve had lived with an aunt since the death of her parents, and the aunt was the first to warn her. She was almost widowed with the scandal of it when Eve came in long after 10 one evening and announced in a matter of fact manner that she'd been at the little place on Elm st., working with Carstairs.

Eve's aunt fretted and eyed her perverse charge askance, but shortly after Mrs. Doughty, whose daughter, Jane, once occupied the position Eve now held, appeared on the scene with a confidential warning that thumped horror in the soul of Aunt Emma.

She had it out with Eve that evening after sitting up with her until nearly 11.

"Do you know what people are saying?" asked Aunt Emma. "I can guess," replied Eve.

"Well, my dear, you can't stay here unless you promise not to go to that place any more."

Eve stared at her aunt. "You mean," she said, incredulously, "you don't trust me—that you think there's something wrong."

"No, I don't," answered Aunt Emma, "but a girl can't afford to take any chances. The first thing you know Cary Thorne will be back, and then what? You know you can't afford to lose Cary—he's the only man who ever looked at you."

Eve blushed. It was true Cary Thorne had liked her and told her so, but he'd left Tiverton and now he was coming back.

"If Cary can't trust me he don't—re," she said, "and if you feel the way you do, I'll get a room with Mr. Wilkinson."

Great indeed was the buzz of busy tongues when Eve moved from the roof that had sheltered her all these years. Aunt Emma felt a glow of almost martyr-like elation as she walked to church. "I'd have done just the same thing," said Mrs. Doughty to Cary Thorne, who gets back."

Eve was a trifle apprehensive of Cary's return. She was found of him though he'd never gone so far as to hint that he couldn't live without her, but he might.

He heard the news soon enough and went right to Eve. But he didn't ask a word—he just took her two hands in his and stared straight into her blue eyes; then he slowly drew her to him and kissed her.

"Will you marry me, Eve?" he asked.

Eve burst into tears but she could answer "yes" with a clear conscience.

Old Mr. Carstairs learned all about the gossip—but he didn't say a word until after Eve was married. He didn't even go to the wedding but after it was all over he sent for the bride and bridegroom to come to his office.

When they appeared he scowled at Eve, "So you've quit me for good," he asked.

Eve went over to him, "no," she said, "Cary says I can still work for you—you see he's making enough for us to live on but I told him all about your wonderful plan to help the poor children of Tiverton—and he says—"

"Never mind what he says," answered the old gentleman, "here's a wedding present for you." He handed a small envelope to Eve, "don't open it now and don't thank me for it—but when you get back run in and see me. Bring along I'm busy."

Eve and Cary stopped in front of the drug store and opened the envelope. Inside was a certified check for $50,000

The local paper had the story next morning—all about Mr. Carstairs' plan to help the poor children of Tiverton—a wonderful plan, educated and progressive—that's what Eve had been working on with him. He gave her full credit for it. A million dollars was the foundation and the interest was to be used to aid worthy boys and girls. And on the board was Eve.

The news of the check got out too and after the honeymoon Aunt Emma came to call on Eve.

"And what happened?" asked Cary.

"Well," said Eve, "I thought charity should begin at home so I kissed her and told her to forget it, but she said one true thing —she said I had a wonderful husband."

The Birth of Venus -:- A la Modern -:-

DRAWN BY Nell Brinkley

IT WON'T BE LONG now before Venus is born all over again of the sapphire and lace of the sea—the modern Venus, of course. You must take a good look at her—for, according to the obscure but strong whisper that is spreading all over the world, and especially in these U. S. that has gone "skeleton" so long with all its might, the new Venus of the coming summer is fading back a little closer to the lady of the Greeks. Closer to the figure of that lady that we are familiar with, tying her sandal in marble, frozen in marble with one hand on her heart and head turned over her shoulder, struck to stone with one knee bent to hold the cascading drapery—and both arms cruelly, helplessly off.

Closer to her—but not right back to her! No. Not so generous as that in comely curves! But curved. A lovely medium between the two. Back to the figure that is most natural to the greatest number of girls and women. We might call her the nymph-figure. The figure that is a flowing series of subtly-joined curves no more the painfully striven-for one we have had with us—natural to some girls all the way to the age of ancient eighty, natural to most girls of fourteen, but oh so unnatural to the rest of us except by the thorny hungry road of unwise starvation—that figure that in sea-costume was a series of angles, their jointures plain to see!

The sculptor will always know the beauty of the figure close to the more "light" Venus-type. The artist will always vote for the nymph-like curves. The fashion-show-man still walks his gowns about on the pretty mosquito figure. But they say he is weakening.

We know that the showman of the stage has gone back to the girl-figure that shows that it is woman-figure too. Study the rows of hard-working girls behind the footlights, going with unbelievable abandon through routines that grow more and more difficult, and you will find vanished, almost, the back that was a mechanism of little bones, the sharp knee and peak-like elbow—and in their places, believe it or not, Mr. Ripley, actually a few discreet DIMPLES!

It won't be long now, here in the dark-skied East who still sits in the lap of a doubtful Winter, and wishes, because he will neither be Winter with real snow nor Summer with sun, that he was well out of it, until we see this girl and this sparkling Summer-self. Out there in California you already have these nice things. Down there in Florida you are familiar with them, too. We are waiting.

Take note that this young modern Venus, who is heralded as wearing so few clothes, wears much, MUCH more than the ancient Venus did either on sea or land!

Tiger Heart -:- By Robert Terry Shannon

"ARE YOU just guessing, Higgins, or do you know something?" Garson asked [illegible], shrewdly.

"I'm guessing and I ain't. Leave Miss Kitty out, for a minute. Take Smith—I've been watching her in the kitchen, in the pantry, and around the house—she's nervous as hell, Duke. Now, why would she be nervous—that's what I'm asking you?"

"I don't know," Garson responded, levelly. "You know her best—is she a friend of yours?"

"Well, she ain't crazy about me. You know, Duke, I'm the kind that likes a bit of fun sometimes, but there's not a chance on earth with Smith. She's one of these damned, dried-up New Englanders. So far as I know, she's never had a sweetheart. Maybe that's the trouble with her—maybe she's got these suppressed emotions you read about."

"All right—go on."

"All that's just speculation. Now, here's what I know: When Mr. Tracy was here this morning I happened to see Smith talking to him."

"That's not exactly a crime, Higgins."

"Wait; they were standing in a corner of the hall, and he wasn't just exchanging a casual word with her. No; she was talking to him so low that I couldn't hear, but she certainly was meaning what she was saying. Here's the thing that got me: my eye was hard on one hand on his arm. Servants don't act that way toward guests—not Smith, anyway. Tracy brushed her hand down once and she put it back. He said something to her and turned and walked away. Figure it out for yourself from there on, Duke."

Garson conceded, carefully, the interest he had in the story.

"From what you've said, you might suspect Tracy even more than the girl," he asserted, warily.

"I might, but I don't," Higgins said, with a faint stubbornness. "He's not."

"Well, I'll remember what you told me," Garson said, dismissal in his voice. "Thanks very much, Higgins; I'll see you later."

Left alone, he began slowly, thoughtfully, to co-ordinate in his mind this new information. A possible connection between Jim Tracy and Mary Smith, meager, suppressed intense—even if it existed, might easily mean nothing, as far as the pearls were concerned. Probably no such connection existed. Higgins probably had magnified what he had seen. That was one way of looking at it. On the other hand—

No, it seemed a waste of thought, of brain power, to imagine Jim Tracy as a thief. Whatever he was, he wasn't that. At the worst, he was no more than a play boy, a little brother of the rich. If he sought to marry for money, it was something vastly different from downright dishonesty.

And the girl, Mary Smith—there was a prim impatience about her, an instant repudiation of any personal frailty. There was something about her eyes as hard as stones. Her native Connecticut and the honesty of New Englanders was a by-word, a tradition. True, she might be guilty of anything, but by all external tests she was not at all the criminal type. As he tried to link Mary Smith and Jim Tracy with the theft of the pearls Garson found his mind constantly defying any such theory, and manufacturing reasons to refute them.

The whole truth was that his interest in the pearls was secondary. His only real interest was in Connie. Nevertheless he knew the stolen pearls gave him a reason for remaining in the house; too, they stimulated an intellectual curiosity. If possible, he meant to solve the mystery.

Such work, of course, fell within the province of a detective, but what Garson had seen of rural man hunters, he was confident that he had, at least, an equal mental equipment. In the main, they depended upon stool pigeons, luck and the innate stupidity of criminals. More often than not they failed in their business of detecting, but this was not unusual; men in all walks of life were constantly failing. The worst possible failure, he conceived, was to miss the fine essence of happiness to be found in human relations.

It was strange, but Duke Garson never before felt so definitely the value of the intimate and personal. He had regarded mankind as a whole and knit fabric. Now that he knew Connie Calvert, he was conscious of an acute dissatisfaction, a suspense of uncertainty. Here and now, when he should have been comfortably happy, he was obsessed with an obstinate mental discomfort. Something unpredictable and illusive of understanding was coming in his life stream.

An impatience, a desire for physical activity, seized him and he found his hat. When he returned from a vigorous tramp along the road and through the wooded hills he found Connie, Kitty and Jim Tracy in the living room; in a few minutes dinner would be served.

"There's no news—nothing has happened," Connie told him, in response to his query. "The only thing is that Mary Smith is leaving. She says she needs a rest, and she is leaving tomorrow."

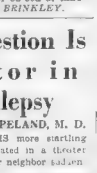
Indigestion Is Factor in Epilepsy

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.

NOTHING IS more startling than to be seated in a theater and have your neighbor suddenly slump in his seat, "throwing a fit," as the slang would have it. That is exactly what happened in a theater the other evening. You can imagine the excitement and fuss created by this incident. One of the theater-goers had an attack of epilepsy.



Dr. Copeland

Epilepsy is a disturbance of the nervous system, in which there are more or less regular attacks of unconsciousness. These attacks may be associated with or without convulsions.

When there is loss of consciousness, without the convulsions, the doctors give the condition the name "petit mal." If the loss of consciousness is accompanied by general convulsions, it is known as "grand mal."

Epilepsy still remains one of the great unsolved mysteries of medicine. The doctors understand its mechanism and readily recognize the disease. But it is extremely difficult to find the cause of many of the cases.

Never become excited if you are near one who is having an epileptic spasm. The condition is easily recognized by the sudden loss of consciousness, frothing at the mouth and the twitching of the body. These are the common symptoms.

Try to help the victim. If you will keep cool you can do so, and perhaps prevent the damage the patient may do himself.

During the attack, a cork or piece of wood, even a lead pencil, should be placed between the teeth. This is done to prevent biting of the tongue, which frequently happens. Loosen the clothing and place the patient on a couch or the floor.

The attack passes off quickly and no special treatment is necessary. Usually it is followed by a period of quiet sleep for an hour or so. If the convulsions persist, a physician should be called. He will give the proper medication.

Many Ways to Serve Potatoes

By MARTHA LEE.

FROM MARTHA LEE'S FRIDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER NATION WLEY

IT DOES SEEM too sad to serve potatoes always either mashed, boiled or fried, when there are so many interesting things you can do with them. Coupled with your trusty skillet, deep fat kettle and favorite shortening.

Martha Lee

Firstly, when I'm boiling potatoes I always boil at least twice as many as I need for the meal in order to have plenty of cold potatoes to work with next day. And, by the way, if you will arrange these left-over potatoes on a platter so that they won't touch each other, they are not so apt to sour as they are when piled on top of each other in a bowl.

Cold-boiled potatoes sliced quite thick and browned quickly on both sides in a liberal amount of fat in a heavy frying pan are truly delicious, especially if liberally seasoned with salt and pepper as soon as the slices are taken from the fat and drained on brown paper.

Carameled sweet potatoes are easily made by slicing cold boiled sweet potatoes, frying them in this same way, sprinkling the slices brown slices generously on both sides with granulated sugar while they are finishing their frying. Or a favorite way with many chefs is to blend together 2 tbsps. of butter and 3 tbsps. of brown sugar, add a little water and turn the thick slices of cold boiled potatoes slowly over and over in this mixture until they acquire a rich caramel coating.

For French fried potatoes you need your deep fat kettle and the frying basket, and about 2 lbs. of fat. The potatoes should be cut in strips about half inch thick and soaked in very cold water an hour. Then drained and dried between towels so there isn't one drop of water will get in the hot fat to cause catastrophe.

Heat your fat slowly—and we imagine that you will use the white vegetable shortening that is so popular for deep fat frying, and which can be strained after using and put back in the can and used over and over again.

[illegible] French fries potatoes until first be sure [illegible] basket is not more than [illegible] full, [illegible] them to a golden brown. Then remove the basket and strain. Then the temperature of the fat is increased to very hot, 395, and the potatoes are quickly browned again.

I have some other potato recipes I'd love to share with you—how to make [illegible] are fried in deep fat Duchess Potatoes, shaped into a mountain and delicately browned in a hot oven; Parisienne Potatoes, that we made in the Martha Lee Cook Book Radio Hour, and a good many others that I think you'll like to have. They'll go to you promptly if you'll drop me a line, enclosing a loose 2 cents stamp.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

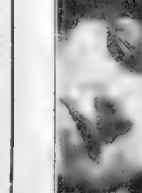
Some Girls give-in so Completely!



The man she was keen to see, but she had to phone that she was [illegible]posed." How flat the excuse had sounded! He wouldn't know what was wrong. She didn't know about Midol.

Why don't every girl who has such a hard time every month adopt this simple, harmless discovery that makes suffering just a memory? Tiny tablets that banish such pain!

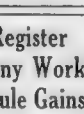
Midol is not a narcotic, but it does banish suffering during the painful period, or from headaches, colds, etc. It acts quite harmlessly, but effectively; complete comfort in five to seven minutes. Cash Register Company Work Schedule Gains

Dayton Plant Is Going on Four-Day Week; Outlook Improving

—— By B. C. FORBES ——

Dayton, Ohio, Feb. 27—Here is good news: The National Cash Register Co., employing 6000 workers, which very recently went on a three-day week is now definitely going on a four-day week.



B. C. Forbes

That was confided to me by H. Barringer, the human dynamo who manages this world-wide enterprise, and who mentioned the fact at a gathering of fully two hundred Dayton citizens there was loud cheering.

Dayton has had its share of the national depression—more or less. This city has a wonderful diversity of industries. It employs highly skilled labor. It pays good wages. It has, too, an unusual number of public-spirited citizens of means and brains. The prevailing spirit here is one of optimism.

Returning after an absence of almost ten years, one sees many marks of solid growth. Dayton is a city of homes, a city of family life, a city of solidity—reminiscent somewhat, of a Scottish city. Its citizens are not carping critics, but rooters.

I moved from New York to Dayton deliberately and you couldn't drag me back to live in New York" said Frank Tale utility giant who has accomplished big things—and done them in such a way that everybody loves him and his company as one resident said to him.

"Frank Tale put 'service' into public utility business before the others knew there was such a thing as giving real service."

So it is a genuine pleasure to meet and mingle with Daytonians. My visit to the immaculate N. C. R. plant, perhaps the most attractive mammoth factory in America, elicited this other inspiring information.

Five hundred additional salesmen are being engaged and trained. The first groups are being put through their paces this week and will immediately return to their respective territories and go to work.

That is the spirit the redoubtable Barringer is showing.

When John H. Patterson the creator and brilliant upbuilder of the N. C. R., passed on nine years ago, many feared the organization might not be able to forge ahead so essentially had he been its mainspring.

Well, the N. R. C. of today is twice the business it was. Under President Frederick B. Patterson and Vice-President and General Manager Barringer all earlier records of progress have been topped. The man Harringer shut in behind a whirlwind of energy is peerless. His courage is indomitable. Said he:

"We are out to become in the accountancy machine business what we have long been in the cash register field, the admitted leaders. We are all set to go. Watch us."

Asked his reading of the general business outlook, Barringer replied:

"This is the best country in the world. Ours is the only country that can have unemployment without labor troubles. Conditions are gradually improving.

"Everybody has been taught a salutary lesson—the executive as well as the man at the bench. When prosperity comes back, as it surely will there will be a better conception of the value of a dollar, a wiser use of money. This will make for sounder prosperity than we have ever before known."

Tomorrow I hope to tell of another local plant of gigantic size that has gone on full time and plans to increase its force next month.

BUS TRAVEL IS MAKING BIG ADVANCES

By FRANK H. MELOON

While many railroads are showing losses in passenger travel, this does not mean that travel by public carriers is not increasing. President C. E. Wilkinson of the Greyhound Corp. tells us that motor buses, which he calls the highest rated of all public utilities, last year carried nearly two billion passengers. Mr. Wilkinson says:

"Annual taxes paid by motor buses amount to 7½ cents out of every dollar they take in. All public utilities, including railroads, pay average taxes of 4.5 cents out of every dollar they receive."

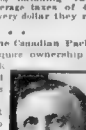
Proposal of the Canadian Pacific Railroad to acquire ownership of the Aroostook Valley Railroad Co. in Maine is especially interesting in that it is planned to buy 2999 shares from U. S. Senator Arthur R. Gould of Presque Isle. Mr. Gould has been a figure in Maine railroad development for three years ago Mr Gould sold his interest in the then proposed Quebec extension railway system Northern Aroostook County, to R. H. Wheeler of New York.



Arthur R. Gould

Mr. Gould, who rose to the U. S. Senate from one of the Pine Tree state's multitudinous farms, stands on first two inches tall. He has been called Maine's "J. Murray Crane" in view of the silent, clever acter of his leadership. The biggest monument to his local fame is the vocational section of Aroostook County where railroads thrive via the mighty pulp route.

One incident that happened during Mr. Gould's career as a State Senator illustrates his methods. He was chairman of the committee on Boys' and Girls' Institutions and as such was sponsor of a bill calling for an appropriation of $20,000 for a building. The bill was vetoed and the veto sustained. Mr. Gould was determined that the building should be erected and he offered $100 out of his own pocket. The offer was accepted and the school was built.

President John J. Pelley of the New Haven presents a vivid picture of the bus rate war, in which a newcomer to the field with a $1 tax has forced others to follow suit for a trip between Boston and New York. A timetable on my desk of one big line shows geographic territory covered to all important points by its carriers. The New Haven alone, President Pelley points out, has about 1000 motor trucks and buses on Southern New England highways.

When the Boston-New York rate was $4 none of the lines was making money, Pennsylvania Pelley states frankly. We have been told by managers of other lines that they have also been running "in red." This has little to do with general business conditions, but it recalls the current joke about Carter prospering in 1930. The company makes red ink.

Puget Sound's Net for Year Larger

Contoocook Mills Selling Approved

Stockholders of Contoocook Mills Corp. at a special meeting voted to authorize directors to proceed as they may see fit to liquidate or sell the corporation. They confirmed also the offer of Republic Knitting Mills Co. of Detroit for assets machinery, raw materials, supplies and business of Pawtucket Hosiery Co. a division of Contoocook Mills.

Aroostook's Net in January Good

Bangor, Me., Feb. 27 (AP)—Largest January net income with one exception in four years was reported today by the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad. The total was $162,398. The exception was in January of last year when the net income totalled $253,033. Net revenue from operations was $308,634 as compared with $410,857 last year.

World Output of Lead Is Lowered

World output of refined lead in January declined to 145,510 short tons as compared with 153,840 tons in December and 143,772 tons in January, 1930, the American Bureau of Metal Statistics reports.

Colgate Buying of Cadum Is Denied

New York, Feb. 27—President Charles S. Pearce of the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company said today that, contrary to reports, it is not buying the Cadum Soap Company of France.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Utilities were the best holders of ground in Wall Street today while selling was going on. This group benefited by the fact that bearish propaganda regarding adverse legislative action at the present session of Congress has not proved true. It has also been helped by good earnings statements.

Merger Rumors Come With Rise

Many merger rumors have been brought into Wall Street by the market's rise. It is known that some of importance have been awaiting favorable market conditions.

Columbia Gas Is Growing Rapidly

Columbia Gas & Electric may be eligible to membership in the Stillman Dollar Club within a few years if it continues to grow as rapidly as in the past three years. On Dec. 31 1930, it had assets of $716,351,000, against $671,234,000 at close of 1929 and $613,459,259 at close of 1928.

Harvester Showing Found Creditable

Considering poor agricultural conditions, International Harvester made a creditable showing last year. After regular dividends, it added $9,034,000 to surplus. The past four years Harvester has added $48,856,000 to surplus after dividends, equal to more than 70 per cent of par value of preferred outstanding.

Waiting Attitude Taken by Traders

The market has taken on a waiting attitude. There has not been sufficient time passed for traders to forget how they were burned by being too rash during the false moves of the last 12 months; therefore, "caution" is the watchword of the moment, and momentary direction is enhanced by reason of late advances recorded by the leaders.

Beth.-Republic Parley Indicated

Despite denials, gossip in the steel trade indicates there have been some conversations looking to a Bethlehem-Republic merger, although definite deal is some distance away. As expected, the rumored merger of Sears, Roebuck and Montgomery Ward was officially denied to the extent of saying letters of agreement had not been reached.

Action of Steel Most Important

Having been successfully utilized by the bull forces to impart confidence to the list, the action of Steel common will be the most important index to the entire market's immediate course.

Jersey Standard Aided by Decision

Congressional declination to place an embargo on oil may encourage greater activity in Standard of New Jersey, which has a vast stake in the foreign oil fields.

Transamerica's Rise Convincing

Persistent advance in Transamerica has finally convinced many important former bears on the stock that the current strength is due to more than short covering.

Boston & Maine common dropped 2 points and Atchison was over a point lower. Old Colony was down nearly 4 points and Maine Central was 2 lower.

First National Stores was strong with a gain of over a point. New England Telephone advanced 2 point to a new 1931 high. Gillette moved up over a point. General alloys and United Fruit each gained around 2 points.

Directors of Gillette Safety Razor have deferred action on the quarterly dividend of $1 on the common stock, due April 1. Regular quarterly payment of $1.25 on preferred was authorized.

CURB MARKET VOLUME OF TRADING OFF

New York, Feb. 27—Irregularity and dullness were partners on the curb market today. Bulls had difficulty keeping the rally alive, although they got a little response from some utilities and small declines on profit taking were frequent. Volume slumped.

United Light & Power "A" continued to lead the ragged advance, rising more than a point to another new high.

Announcement that Associated Gas & Electric had completed payment to Empire Power Corporation of a sum said to approximate $60,000,000 for properties acquired nearly two years ago stimulated an advance in Associated "A."

Recent strength of Standard Gas & Electric was reflected in activity of U. S. Electric Power, which holds a substantial interest in Standard.

It is officially reported that the Dayton Airplane Engine Co. has developed a new device which will permit short take-offs and landings by planes.

PRICE MOVES ARE ERRATIC IN WALL ST.

New York, Feb. 27—Price moves were erratic in Wall st. today, with trends changing suddenly.

Through most of the session professionals kept the bull market in stocks simmering today by stirring up several of the special and minor issues, after speculative fires in the recent leaders were cooled by a wave of profit-taking.

The list sold off substantially during the early trading, a handful of shares losing 2 to 4 points, but other shares were in demand, forcing forward to show gains of 2 to 5, and losses were largely recovered.

The advance was faithful, but marked to show a slight gain by early afternoon. U. S. Steel was well supported and sold up over a point after allowing for the dividend.

Buoyant specialties were Holland Furnace, Purity Baking and Postum Oil preferred, up 4 and 5 points, while gains of 2 to 3 were recorded by such stocks as Superior Steel, Warren Bros. Kroger, Wrigley, Lehn & Fink, Borg Warner, Columbian Carbon and Case.

Among the coppers, American Smelting, Anaconda, Kennecott and American Zinc gave up fractions to two. During the early downturn, losses of 2 to 4 were recorded by Allied Chemical, Westinghouse Electric, Case, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Frisco and Auburn.

DIVIDEND ACTIONS

The day's news included several adverse dividend actions, and forecasts of others. Recent heaviness of Gillette was explained by deferment of the extra distribution, and the sharp drop in Frisco Railroad was in response to unofficial rumors that the 62 quarterly dividend will be reduced to $1.

Predictions that the earnings of J. C. Penney from $3 to $3.50 a share possible cause Hills supplies for 72 days, a year ago, 47 days.

A few favorable items appeared, and stocks responded well. Borden Co. announced that sales for January, first month of new year, were a record, a recession of only about 2 per cent from December, considered remarkable, the last named influenced in part by report that the per ton quotation advanced eight cents.

The market was apparently unimpressed by the latest recurrence of the golden bonus bill, for veto and repass seem to be confidently expected in Wall Street.

The effects of uncertainty over the Fathengill announcement and more specific, however, were plainly visible in the report of the volume of proxy and proxy signatures which amounted to less than 2,000,000.

Call money remained abundant, however, while call money again free of offered outside at one percent. This, however, was interpreted as showed that the reserve banks had withdrawn more credit.

Trading in the early hours of the session was at a rate of building contracts let in the third week of the month, a substantial showing from the 123 million dollars for the first three weeks last year. Contracts awarded in the first three weeks of this month were 111 million dollars.

Port of Boston News

By JAMES J. DELANEY

New method of taking coffee from vessels at the Army Base Terminal just adopted has resulted in the speed rate of discharge being almost doubled and less damage to the shipment than is possible at any other port in the world.

Co-operation between the Maritime Association of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and the Boston coffee importers to bring about an increase in the movement of coffee to this port has brought this result which is hailed by shippers and importers.

Stevedores and longshoremen, who have been discharging coffee by the new method from the S. S. West Selene of the American Republic Line, were praised by officials for the way they worked together in handling the cargo.

Motor trucks rigged with special platforms get slingloads of 12 bags beside the ship and bring it to the interior of the wharf shed where each bag is removed from the sling to the separate piles marked off by the checkers.

Imports of coffee in 1929 were 41,760 bags, while 1930 showed them to be 400,000 bags.

SAN BLAS SAILS

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Holden of Shirley, were passengers on the San Blas of the United Fruit Co., which left Long Wharf for Havana, Kingston and ports in Honduras.

SEVERANCE DRYDOCKS

General overhauling of the S. S. Severance, now under charter to the Mystic Steamship Co., but owned by the Diamond Steamship Transportation Co. of Boston, is today way at the Atlantic Works, East Boston. The steamer came up from Beverly and was put into the drydock.

BIG AWARD

Award of the repair job on the British steamer Birchgrange, damaged by an engine room fire Sunday night will be made today. Bids were taken in the office of C. A. Lombard Sons. The Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corp. bid $27,495 with a guarantee to finish the work in two weeks.

Kill the Old "Lame Duck"

States Can Eliminate This Evil

By the overwhelming vote of 289 to 93, the House of Representatives has finally gone on record in favor of abolishing the "lame duck" session of Congress.

Under the leadership of Speaker Longworth, 158 Republicans, 130 Democratic, and 1 Farmer-Labor member of Congress finally voted for the Norris resolution with certain amendments.

The differences between the original Norris resolution, as adopted by the Senate some time ago, and the form in which it has just been adopted by the House must now be adjusted in conference.

These differences do not involve the main purpose of the proposed amendment, which is to eliminate the 13-month interval that now takes place between the election of a new Congress and its convening in regular session.

As amended by the House, the Norris resolution provides that the new Congress would assemble on January 4, following its election, and the new President and Vice-President would take office on the ensuing January 24.

If the election is thrown into the House, and the House has not chosen a President before the time fixed for his inauguration, provision is made that the Vice-President shall act as President.

In the event of the death of the President-elect, or the death of both the President and Vice-President-elect, Congress is authorized to provide by law for meeting such a situation.

In even numbered years, the second regular session would end on May 4, in ample time for the country to prepare for the nomination and election of a new Congress and a new President and Vice-President.

The original Norris resolution adopted by the Senate fixed January 2 for the assembling of the new Congress, and January 15 for the inauguration of the President and Vice-President.

The Senate provided that the Vice-President shall act as President in case a President has not been chosen before January 15.

No limitation was fixed by the Senate for the length of the second regular session of Congress, or for the time within which the legislatures of the states must act upon the proposed amendment.

These in the main are details of procedure. If a reasonable spirit of compromise quickens their consideration in conference, as it certainly should, there is ample time before adjournment for an effective "lame duck" amendment to the Constitution to be agreed upon by the two Houses and transmitted to the President for submission to the several states.

The paramount purpose of the overwhelming majority of Senators and Representatives in both Houses who have supported this legislation is to end once and for all the obsolete method under which the newly elected Congress is made to mark time for 13 months until it can assemble in regular session.

This obsolete arrangement makes our Federal Government one of the most unresponsive popular governments in the world.

Adoption by the states of a "lame duck" amendment to the Constitution would eliminate this evil and give to the Federal Government a machinery responsive to the public will.

The country-wide public sentiment in favor of a "lame duck" amendment to the Constitution, which it has long been the privilege of the Hearst newspapers to voice, demands that the two Houses quickly adjust their differences, and submit this progressive measure to the states for ratification.

Thirty-three state Legislatures meet this year. More than the three-fourths whose support is required for ratification.

If the Congress will act promptly, there is no reason why the "lame duck" amendment cannot be ratified in time to become effective during 1931.

Punishing Dope Dealers

If you caught a man or a woman selling dope to your son, or your daughter—what would you do about it?

Have the culprit arrested and taken to court, of course.

And when you got him to court—what would happen to him?

Would the case be tried by a judge who knows what the drug traffic is, and what it means to the youth of this country?

Or would some judge sit on the bench and either punish the pedlar with a small fine which would represent about one-fifth of one day's income or would he remit the fine altogether—and let it go at that?

And then watch and see what happens to the dope dealer.

It may surprise you.

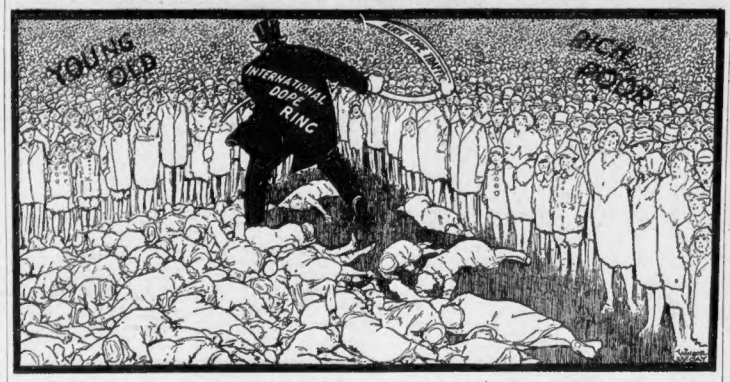
REAPING HIS HARVEST---DEATH



Civilization's worst menace today is the infamous traffic in narcotic drugs.

With its far-flung illicit trade, the Dope Ring steadily mows down its victims, sending some to early graves, others to the more terrible living death.

Americans are just beginning to realize the insidiousness of this foe from overseas. For ten years we have been the dumping ground for the output of the international Dope Ring. The traffic has grown steadily.

Dope pours in on us in a never-ending flood from China, Japan, India, Egypt, and over our borders from Canada and Mexico. The greed of the Opium Ring blocks all efforts to check the supply at its source.

Only when the nations of the Western Hemisphere erect a sturdy wall of laws and unified enforcement will they stem this dope tide.

Canada, Mexico and the United States should take the lead in calling a Pan-American Conference to map out a concerted attack on this foe.

This is Narcotic Education Week. It would be a fitting time for the Administration at Washington to announce the call of such a conference.

Listen, World! Two Lives

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Only One Is Seen by Others

YOU LIVE two lives.

One is the life which other men see—which you live and express in your body. The other is the life you live inside your body—which no one sees but yourself and that mysterious power men call God.

Two lives—one the life of the senses, vivid, active, full of taste, sound, sight, touch and feeling . . . the other without senses, moving silently, blindly, unseen through your thoughts and emotions.

Elsie Robinson

Yet, strangely, that unseen life is the more active . . . the more powerful . . . it is, indeed, your own real life.

There, in the silence and the darkness, your destiny is determined. Your "seen" life is only a reflection of that inner life.

There is nothing occult or mysterious about that statement. You can prove its truth very simply. Look around at the furniture in your room—the chairs, tables, pictures, curtains, books, radio. These are material things—now. But before they were material things they were immaterial things and existed in the mind. But that existence was a real existence.

There was their pattern made, bit by bit—as surely as that copy was, later on, copied on loom and press. Those things lived in some man's mind before they were ever copied by any man's hand. And all that you see is only the copy of some man's secret life.

As things live in the mind, so do thoughts live in the mind. As a chair is born in the mind before it is seen by the eye, so an act is born in the mind before it is expressed by the hands or the tongue. And those secret inner acts determine all your outer life.

You think that thoughts don't matter.

They are the only things that do matter. You are what you think . . . and what you feel. You are what you are inside.

Your secret life may be utterly unlike your outer life, but it is, nevertheless, your real life, and sooner or later it will put its mark on your every act. Try as hard as you may to hide it, it will creep into your voice, it will peer furtively through your eyes, it will find a way to manipulate your hands.

You cannot think a thing without being it.

You smile as you read that. You don't believe it's true. There are those secret dreams of yours. No one suspects you have those dreams, you're so hum-drum, so respectable. And you certainly wouldn't want anyone to know about them. They're far from respectable! But that's just why you have them.

You're so sick of dullness . . . so weary of being respectable. Those dreams are your safety valve. Surely it can't hurt to have an indulgence that will never go any further than your own mind.

But it will go further than your own mind.

Little by little that unseen life will make itself seen.

Some day you'll suddenly find yourself saying something you hadn't meant to say . . . doing something you hadn't meant to do . . . showing an interest in something, getting excited or angry about something that is utterly at variance with the personality and the program you've shown the world. You'll be shocked, surprised, perhaps humiliated. You'll wonder why on earth you did that. How could you do something so unlike yourself. But it wasn't unlike yourself.

It was yourself, your real self, making itself seen at last.

And so, by the same token, if your inner life is lovely and rich, your outer life will reflect that loveliness, that richness, though you live in the humblest circumstances.

Stop being so anxious about your outward acts. Be a great deal more anxious about your inner life, which you now think "doesn't matter." There, in your secret thoughts, you are building your heaven . . . or digging your hell.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Men Are Like That

NEXT TO a stalled motor car, the hardest thing on earth to budge is a man's mind! Next to Niagara, the hardest thing to turn out of its course is the current of his thought.

A woman's ideas "just spring into her head," but a man's come by the slow process of geological formation. And once SET, they are as immovable as the Rock of Gibraltar.

The only thing more difficult than to get a brand NEW idea into a man's head and consciousness is to get it OUT again.

Take the love-idea, for instance. While a man is still trying to decide whether a girl's eyes are blue, gray or green, she has already decided on the color scheme for the wedding and is planning the living room curtains. By the time the love-idea has penetrated his consciousness, she has been waiting at the church, mentally, for him so long that she is ready to topple over into his arms from sheer fatigue.

* * *

But once he gets the impression that a woman is in love with him, it sinks in like a laundry mark, and no acid can remove it—not even her marriage to another man!

Next to getting a man started in any direction, the hardest thing on earth is to stop him! It takes three full weeks, every autumn, to persuade him to shut the front door behind him—and three more weeks every spring to coax him to leave it open after him. He has to be threatened with pneumonia before he will wear his golf sweater in March; but he has to be threatened with sunstroke before he will take it off in June. He is a creature of habit!

* * *

A woman no longer faints from astonishment when her husband glances at her last season's hat and remarks, "I like that new lid you've got on!" She knows that, while he has been looking at it for months, it has only just reached his consciousness as she is ready to throw it away.

* * *

Woman is the changeable, discontended, progressive sex. Her thoughts and opinions are written in rainbow water. But a man's are set down in indelible ink! His heart may change — but his mind — NEVER!

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

Thoughts While Strolling

NEW YORK, Feb. 27—Thoughts while strolling: What became of the fellow who hit Houdini a fatal blow? There doesn't seem any use for isinglass any more. A funeral procession breezing through traffic. Somehow I think of Opie Read when O. P. Heggie is mentioned.

Rupert Hughes, a Lancaster, Mo., boy, who made good in the city. Rockwell Kent's the most talked about writer-artist. Sausage and pancake counters. Does anyone ever remember a cornet player? Lucidea in Schrafft's who try to act as though they really enjoyed cigarettes.

That Fifth ave. Child's where female impersonators flock after midnight. Mayor Walker's official green limousine. And the athletic young chauffeur. The old Belmont, empty but still standing. What became of Dorothy Knapp? Girls so highly educated nobody interests them.

Sidewalk hawkers along the library wall and look-outs keeping eyes for police. Needle threaders, snap purses, trick mirrors, books of magic, 50 cent fountain pens and key rings. Careless police dog owners who try to show their pets are under perfect control. They need a few summonses.

Blind George knows newspaper stand customers by foot-fall and voice. That music store on 42d st. Windows filled with accordions, cornets, drums, zithers, saxophones, triangles, ukes and piccolos. And the salesman who can play any instrument. Chevalier's funny hats. What became of the legless newsie at Broadway and 42d? Wonder how much longer the Astor will occupy that site. Daddy Browning at a drug store counter. And his name is now in the biggest lights on Broadway. Almost a block long.

The Paramount theater tower lights up only on Saturday night. The market crash made it soft for fortune tellers. Lyda Roberti, the platinum haired Polish girl, who is a new toast on Broadway. And deservedly. I've enjoyed being with you so much today.

Five New Yorkers received personal greeting cards from the Prince of Wales New Year's. The cards bore a seascape by Bernard Gribble entitled: "Hudson Sailed the Atlantic."

Fanny Hurst, for years pronouncedly plump, suddenly becomes so surprisingly thin friends do not recognize her. She affects simple frocks of all black and her customary red tam is supplanted by a black cloche. Incidentally, it is so frequently gossiped Miss Hurst and Edna Ferber are not only literary rivals but do not speak that I am pleased to chronicle I saw the talented twain in a conversational and smiling huddle at tea the other day. No fur was flying.

* * *

He is a wide-batted classic with a black string tie, white goatee and mustache and hair to the shoulders. As he came into a speakeasy he stopped before a mirror, pressed his mustache and adjusted his pocket handkerchief. "Buffalo Bill," hiccupped a drunk, "gone sissie!"

* * *

Last stand of the Nordic note: Roy L. McCardell can remember way back when there were Christian stage comedians.

In a Chicago club a group of 20, constituting a club within a club, holds forth in a certain room. The waiter has attended them for years, often makes a fourth at bridge, and is otherwise privileged. Recently a member asked the waiter to "sweeten" a libation at his elbow. "Not another damn drop," replied the waiter. "There's a servitor," observed George Ade, "who knows how to cringe."

* * *

Last night I picked up a murder mystery which opened smack on the barrel head with: "Blood crawled under the door, slow, turgid, viscuous, snaleish. On the landing it spread into a great distorted, clutching hand, with crawling fingers, reptilian, bulbous tipped and gleaming red against darkness." With that as a starter, a lightning storm and a high wind shrieking outside and four fresh popcorn balls within easy reach on the night table, it was grand. I haven't had as much fun since I used to get tight at parties and go into a Spanish dance.

Frank Buck's Gripping Adventure Story of Big Game in Tropical Jungles

TRAPPED WITH A KING COBRA—JUST AN INCIDENT IN THE DAY'S WORK OF "BRINGING 'EM BACK ALIVE"

If you are tired of sexy stories, gangster confessions, crime and politics, read Frank Buck's thrilling yarn of big game traping in Far Eastern jungles. It begins today in this newspaper on the sporting pages. After one installment—if you have a drop of red blood in your veins—you will be an addict.

Buck has one of the most perilous jobs in the world. He traps wild animals for American zoos, from Bronx Park in New York to San Diego, California. He supplies thousands of them to circuses. And after eighteen years of it, facing death from charging elephants, savage tigers and venomous cobras, he admits that he is afraid of animals.

Soon he will be going back to the Malay Peninsula, to French Indo-China, to Siam, Burma, and half a dozen other tropical lands, as he has been doing since 1912. It may be his last trip. In his business you never can tell when "something may slip." But thrills that outnumber those of a century of dull city living are packed into each chapter of his gripping serial. And the vivid illustrations by the famous artist, Hal Coffman, are as good as the text.

Don't miss this great adventure story. It's TRUE, and any real man or boy who reads it will heartily envy Frank Buck and the hazardous calling he pursues.

Woman Talk Camouflage

By WINIFRED BLACK

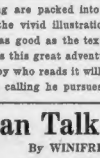
But "Things Are Plain to See"

CAMOUFLAGE—what a queer word it is.

And what a queer, stupid, senseless, unavailing thing it is, too.

We never heard of the word—most of us—until the World War, which taught us many new things.

"Vin Blanc" and "Vin Rouge" and "Combine," and "C'est la "Combine" and all the rest of the foreign slang that set so oddly on the plain English of the American tongue.



Winfred Black

But camouflage was the worst of all.

It was the worst because we thought it meant something, something new and strange and different—and it didn't.

It didn't mean a thing, but just something—that wasn't.

We found it out when we came face to face with "camouflage" in its own peculiar home town.

I read about camouflage ships, and strange pictures of weird, ghostly visitants clouded my delighted, if somewhat bewildered, brain.

A man-o'-war painted to look like the waves of the ocean, a nest of guns camouflaged to look like a pig-sty or a quiet farmyard, a line of march camouflaged to have the exact appearance from a distance of a number of market carts driven by cheery farmers on their way to town.

What a lovely make-believe word. Nothing harsh, nor ugly, nor menacing to be seen, even right in the very midst of a horrible war.

And then I went to France and saw the camouflage—and it did camouflage a thing—not really.

The battleships looked just exactly like battleships, only they were painted with queer stripes or something.

The big guns did not look like pitchforks, or bundles of fagots, or looked like big guns, and the dusty roads where the troops were marching looked like country roads.

No, there is no use talking, the only trouble with the brilliant idea of camouflage was that it didn't camouflage!

I kept thinking about it the other day when the woman I know was camouflaging about her affairs.

They were her own personal affairs, and I didn't care a snap about them myself, not a single solitary snap.

But when the woman began to camouflage and explain, and apologize and "Tell it to Sweeney," I was seized with a biting curiosity.

What was the matter with the woman—really?

Was she in love with someone who belonged to somebody else?

Had she been mean and crafty and cruel, and was she trying to make me and all the rest of the world, including herself, believe that she had been kind and simple-hearted, and honest?

What was it all about, anyhow?

Now if she hadn't camouflaged I would never have given it a second thought.

Truth is the queerest thing in the world. No wonder the ancients put truth at the bottom of a deep well.

You have to hide it there to keep people, even the very simplest people, from seeing it, and the simpler they are the plainer they can see.

Camouflage—poul, what camouflage it is, to be sure.
